Two Refuse to Answer When Questioned as to Attitude on Senatorship.

Alarmed by their knowledge that Senator Lodge lacks nine votes of the 141 necessary to elect him in joint ballot, his managers are attempting to get Democratic members of the Legislature to break faith with their party platform and vote for him.

Five Democratic members of the House are claimed for Lodge.

They are:

Thomas F. McCullogh of Holyoke.
James H. McInerney of Boston.
William L. V. Newton of Boston.

Refuse to Answer.

Newton and McInerney bluntly refused to answer when asked by an AMERICAN reporter if it was true, as asserted by the Lodge managers, they had pledged themselves for Lodge.

McCullogh hedged, saying that he is endeavoring to ascertain the wishes of his constituents in the matter.

Since the publication in the Sunday AMERICAN of the reports that these men had practically pledged themselves to vote for Lodge they have been subjected to a fire of criticism from their constituents that is growing in volume every moment. They are being smoked out.

Powers For a Democrat.

The story in the Sunday AMERICAN putting every member of the Legislature on record on the Lodge question was the chief subject of conversation on Beacon Hill to-day. The current question was: "How long can McCullough, McInerney and Newton stand the limelight?"

Some legislators raked to-day why Senator James F. Powers of South Boston was not included in the AMERICAN'S list of Democrats who need to be watched on the Lodge question. Rumor has had it for many weeks that Powers would do his best to help Lodge to a re-election. Corporation influence, it was said, had put Powers on the line for Lodge.

The AMERICAN, because of this rumor, put this question squarely up to Senator Powers:

"Is it true that you intend to vote for Lodge or that you intend to dodge the roll-call, and thus help him to be re-elected?"

Powers' answer came promptly:

"Vote for Lodge? Or dodge the roll-call? Do you think I'm crazy? I am a Democrat, elected on the Democratic State platform. I am going to vote for a Democrat for United States Senator—first, last and all the time. And you can take it from me that we are going to elect a Democrat, too. I will never vote for Senator Lodge."

How Legislature Stands.

The AMERICAN'S poll shows that Lodge must be re-elected on the first ballot or not at all. If he fails then there will be a Republican slump toward Congressman John W. Weeks, Speaker Joseph Walker or some other Republican.

Of the total membership of 280 in the Legislature 141 are necessary for a choice on joint ballot. There are 153 Republicans, 126 Democrats and one Socialist in the Legislature. In the House 108 Republicans are pledged to Lodge and in the Senate 24, a total of 132. This leaves him nine short of the number necessary to elect.

In the House there are eight Republicans and in the Senate two pledged against Lodge. There are 108 Democrats in the House and 14 in the Senate and 1 Socialist in the House, all pledged by their party platforms against Lodge. Three of the House Democrats are, however, claimed by the Lodge managers.

Four Republicans in the House are undecided. Three others prefer another Republican, but may vote for Lodge, while two more are booked as doubtful, but with Lodge leanings.

O'CONNELL RETURNS FROM PANAMA TRIP

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell of Massachusetts was among the passengers arriving here this afternoon from Colon, Panama, on the steamer Cristobal.

WOOD ACCEPTS TAYLOR'S TERMS

At last it appears that the existing differences between Pitcher Joe Wood and President Taylor of the Red Sox have been settled, and Joe will be in a Boston uniform this year.

Nobody cognizant of the conditions at the Red Sox headquarters really believed for a minute that Wood would come around to Taylor's terms, and few believed that Taylor was in earnest when he threatened to can Wood and Carrigan.

Shortly after the close of the baseball season Wood and Taylor had a slight argument over salary. Wood wanted an increase over his 1910 salary and John didn't see-it. But at the same time John recognized Wood's value as a pitcher when he is working well.

To-day Mr. Taylor received a letter from the pitcher, who is at Glens Falls, Pa., in which Joe came to terms, and expressed himself as satisfied with his contract. The contract has not yet been signed, but will be within a few days.

Wood says that he is in good condition and feels fit for work this Spring. He also allows that he will play better ball in 1911 than he did last year.

MOTHER GUILTY OF MRS. SNEAD'S DEATH

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 9.—Mrs. Caroline R. Martin, the aged mother of Mrs. Georg W. M. Snead, the "East Orange bath tub victim," to-day pleaded guilty in a charge of manslaughter when placed on trial before Judge Ten Eyck for killing her daughter. Sentence was deferred.

Mrs. Martin had originally pleaded not guilty, but to-day withdrew the plea and pleaded guilty to manslaughter. By this plea Mrs. Martin declares in the eyes of the law that she does not know whether she killed her daughter, and that if she was the means of her daughter's death she was the unwilling means. The agreement to accept a plea of non vult to manslaughter was reached after a conference between Judge Ten Eyck and counsel for Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Martin herself and counsel for her sister, Mrs. Mary W. Snead, who was also indicted for the murder. It is understood that the indictment against Mrs. Snead will be quashed and she will be released.

TWO SENTENCED FOR ANNOYING WOMEN

Stephen Harnander, who gave his address as No. 10 Modena street, Roxbury, was found guilty in the Newton District Court to-day of having annoyed Miss Margaret Cleary and Miss Mary Dorain, both of Hunnewell street, Newton, on Washington street in that city on Saturday night, and was sentenced to six months in the house of Correction for each offense. He appealed and was held for the Superior Court in $1,000. Joseph Canale of Watertown was found guilty of a similar offense, the complainant being Miss Anna Deasey of Harvard street, Newton. He was sentenced to the Concord Reformatory, but appealed and was held in $1,000 for the Superior Court.

TAFT RECOGNIZES ESTRADA'S RULE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 9.—Formal recognition of the Estrada government of the republic of Nicaragua was made to-day by the United States when President Taft nominated Elliott Northcott to be minister to Nicaragua and Franklin Mott Gunther to be secretary of the American legation to Nicaragua.

VOLUNTARY PRISONER DIES OF HIS WOUNDS

BROCKTON, Jan. 9.—After surrendering himself to the police and later attempting suicide by slashing himself with a penknife, Edward F. Holt died to-day in the Brockton Hospital. Holt entered police headquarters and asked that he be arrested for intoxication. While in the cell he cut his throat with a penknife.

YACHT DESIGNER IS SUED

The trial of the suit of Adolphus E. McVey, a former Boston newspaper man, and now a Suffolk County Court officer against Howdoin W. Crowninshield, the millionaire yacht designer, for $10,000 for alleged assault, was begun before Judge Morton in the Superior Court to-day.

Adolphus McVey was the first witness. Contrary to expectations, Mrs. Crowninshield, over whom the quarrel which resulted in the alleged assault occurred, was not in court.

General Charles W. Bartlett is appearing for the plaintiff while Crowninshield is represented by Fletcher Hanes and William E. Monk. The alleged assault occurred at Manchester-by-the-Sea in 1902 during a yacht race in July.

McVey testified that he had been yachting editor of the Boston Herald for 38 years but had ceased to occupy that position for several years. He said that he had been court officer for 26 years.

McVey's Story of Attack.

McVey told this story on the witness stand to-day.

"I was at Manchester-by-the-Sea covering a yacht race for my paper. The date was July 23, 1902. One of the boats had been withdrawn from the race, and I went down on the wharf to find out why.

"I leaned over the edge of the wharf and directly below me was Mr. Crowninshield and his wife in a launch. Before I had a chance to ask the question I had intended, Mrs. Crowninshield looked up and said: 'There's that nasty newspaper man. Go up and throw him overboard.'

"It would have been better for him if you had thrown overboard before he insulted you," I said.

"I then turned around and walked up the wharf. I heard some one running after me and turning around met Crowninshield. He circled about me striking at me, but not hitting me. I grabbed a stick and put myself on guard. Crowninshield desisted and I then continued in my walk.

"Before I got to the end of the wharf Crowninshield was upon me again. He hit me four times. One behind each ear, once on the left cheek and once over the left eye. The last blow brought blood enough so that I soaked several handkerchiefs. He also grabbed both of my cheeks in each of his hands and gouged the flesh.

"'You coward to strike an old man like me!' I exclaimed.

"I was then staying at Beverly Farms. When I got home I was so upset that I went into Boston that night and saw a doctor.

Newspaper Criticism.

"That Summer I went to New York to cover the international cup races. I was so affected by the assault that I had to dictate my stories while I lay in bed.

"The Summer of the assault I weighed 225 pounds. I lost weight until in 1908 I weighed but 184. The other day I weighed myself and I weighed 190."

Under cross-examination the witness was asked:

Q.—Isn't it true that you heard stories about Mrs. Crowninshield at the courthouse and that articles were published about her? A.—I heard them I didn't pay any attention to them.

Q.—Well, you knew the family were opposed to the marriage? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you in your editorial capacity attack the yacht Independence that Mr. Crowninshield designed? A.—I certainly attacked the yacht.

Q.—Well, didn't you know that he designed the yacht? A.—I presumed he did.

Q.—What do you mean by that? A.—Well, I heard Jerre Daniels designed it, and Crowninshield took the whole credit for it.

Q.—Didn't Mrs. Crowninshield, when she came up the wharf on the day of the assault say to you, 'Mr. Ed you saw what you did, didn't you ever have a mother or a sister? A.—No.

Charges Illness to Attack.

General Bartlett read a deposition from Dr. Francis A. Harris of Windsor in which the latter said: "I attribute the plaintiff's diabetic condition to injuries received at the time of the break. The blows he received would be an adequate cause for the condition."

Frank G. Chesley of Manchester, who was taking photographs at the time of the alleged assault, testified in corroboration of Mr. McVey's story. Chief of Police Urquhart of Arlington, formerly police chief of Manchester, testified that he saw blood on the plaintiff's face.

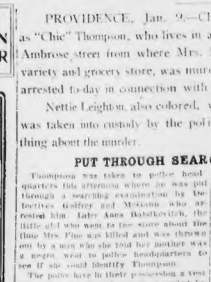
MRS. MINKA FINE, PROVIDENCE WOMAN SLAIN BY ROBBER



MRS MINKA FINE.

NEGRO HELD IN DEATH MYSTERY OF MRS. FINE

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 9.—Clifford Thompson, colored, known as "Chic" Thompson, who lives in a ramshackle building across in Ambrose street from where Mrs. Minka Fine, the widow who kept a variety and grocery store, was murdered early Saturday evening, was arrested to-day in connection with the crime.

Nettie Leighton, also colored, with whom Thompson associated, was taken into custody by the police on suspicion of knowing something about the murder.

PUT THROUGH SEARCHING EXAMINATION.

Thompson was taken to police headquarters this afternoon where he was put through a searching examination by detectives Godfrey and Meighan, who arrested him. Later Anna Batchelorich, the little girl who went to the store about the time Mrs. Fine was killed and was thrown out by a man who she told her mother was a negro, went to police headquarters to see if she could identify Thompson.

The police have in their possession a vest which they found in the room occupied by Thompson which has spots on it that look like blood. This vest was turned over to Medical Examiner Clifford S. Griffin who after looking at the spots, said:

"Without doubt these are blood spots. There are four or five of them in the front. I will have them more closely examined."

Detectives Godfrey and McGinn became convinced early to-day that the man who robbed the widow and put her to death lived in the neighborhood of the crime and knew the woman personally. Because of the fact that the little girl had told them that she saw a negro in Mrs. Fine's store when she went there to make some purchases Thompson was suspected.

Negro Expected Arrest.

Thompson is about twenty-one years of age. He has no relatives that are known here. He lives in a room in a little building occupied by colored people—a place that certainly needs the attention of the Board of Health.

The detectives went in Thompson's room about 11 o'clock. They found him undressed and in bed. Just why he was ordered at 11 o'clock he did not know.

"We want you, Thompson," one of the detectives said to him.

"I expected you to come for me," the detective said he replied.

The young man put on some clothing while the detectives were looking about the room. The only thing they found of a suspicious character was the stained vest. They looked for money, thinking that if he robbed Mrs. Fine it would be concealed in the room, but they found none.

Louis Fine, the oldest son of the murdered woman, took a look at the prisoner. The result of his statement:

"I know that man, Thompson, and I know that he has been in the habit of coming into our store. I have seen him in there about Mrs. Fine's counter at times to my knowledge to buy kerosene.

The prisoner was taken to the Second Precinct Station House, the one in the precinct where the crime was committed, and from there he was transferred to police headquarters.

Colored Woman Questioned.

On the way to the station house no questions were asked of the prisoner, nor did he volunteer any information of any character.

The detectives learned that Thompson was once a great deal in the company of Nettie Leighton, who lives a few doors from him. She is about thirty years of

$1,200,000 IN ROAD REBATES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The interstate commerce commission to-day ordered the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, Chicago & Great Western, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Missouri Pacific, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, St. Joseph & Grand Island, Chicago & Alton, Wabash, Illinois Central, St. Louis & San Francisco, Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and the Kansas City Southern railroads to pay reparation in cases brought against them by shippers on account of overcharges on shipments from Atlantic seaboard points to Missouri river cities. These cases amount to $1,200,000.

The order of the commission is in accordance with an agreement with the railroads made in Chicago on December 23 last. It follows the decision of the United States Supreme Court, in which it was held that the rates thereafter to be published were unjust and excessive, although a prior decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission. On November 10, 1908, the railroads obtained an injunction against the commissions order lowering these rates. The case was brought to the attention of the commission by a number of shipping interests, the Wheeling & Motor Review Line Company, the C. D. Smith Company of St. Louis and the Burton Hanna & Munger Dry Goods Company of Kansas City, being the principal complainants.

The Municipal League has been entirely shut out of the Boston ward rooms tonight, according to a statement by Chairman Chauncey B. Pendleton Maynard of the Democratic City Committee has them all.

Some days ago the league officials found that this assignment had been made and made a protest to the Mayor. The Mayor asked them to specify what ward rooms they required and said he would look into the matter. They submitted a request for the ward rooms in Wards 9, 10, 20, 23, 24 and 25.

To-day Secretary Pree of the league waited on the public building officials for the authority to use those rooms and he was informed that no arrangements had been made and that Mr. Maynard still had control of them.

Secretary Van Tassel of the Public Buildings Department said that last Friday Mr. Pree withdrew application for the rooms in question.

BACK BAY STADIUM IS URGED BY MAYOR

Legislative permission is to be requested by the Mayor to erect a stadium on the Back Bay Fens playground for the schoolboys. He will also at the same time request permission to erect a recreation house in this same territory. "I have no special school in mind now," said the Mayor to-day, but I think it is a good thing to get permission in the event of demand arising. I can say now that Governor Foss will not sign any bill to allow the school committee more money for the erection of a High School of Commerce."

SAILOR ADRIFT IN DORY IS RESCUED

The flag on the fishing schooner Buena which returned to T wharf Saturday with her colors at half-mast for the supposed death of Frank Perry, a member of the crew, has been again hoisted to the peak owing to the news from Portland, Me., that the missing man had been picked up by the steamer Edward Evelyn Thompson and landed at that port. URGES ALL TO POLLS TUESDAY

John A. Coulthurst, chairman of the executive committee of the Citizens' Municipal League, in a communication to the AMERICAN, urges that every voter go to the polls to-morrow regardless of whether he is in sympathy with the work of the league.

The organization has indorsed Dr. Thomas F. Leen and Michael H. Corcoran for the school committee and Joseph A. Sheehan, Earnest E. Smith and Councilor Daniel F. McDonald for the city Council, in his letter Chairman Coulthurst says:

"Next Tuesday is election day. The registered voters of Boston—110,000 in number—have the privilege and the duty to elect three members of the City Council to serve for three years and two members of the School Committee to serve for the same period.

"It behooves every voter to vote. It is almost more important to vote this year—an off year as called—when there has been no stirring campaign, no sensational candidacies or issues, than in a year when the public interest is aroused.

"The Citizens' Municipal League is composed of men of all creeds, races, political beliefs. Its sole object is to promote honest, progressive and efficient city government.

"In the present election it indorses Messrs. Corcoran and Leen for the School Committee, two clean-cut, efficient men, two men of proven capacity and integrity the two essentials in public officials.

BISHOP LAWRENCE ON ADAM AND EVE 'ALLEGORY'

CHURCHMAN SAYS STORY OF GENESIS MAY BE INTERPRETED IN TWO WAYS.

The graphic, romantic and widely read story of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, which is related in the opening chapters of Genesis, may not be true, declares Bishop Lawrence of the Massachusetts diocese. It may be only an allegory, the distinguished churchman says.

It will be recalled that Adam ate some forbidden fruit. When the Lord asked him why he had done it, Adam promptly placed the blame on the woman.

"The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat."

That was the excuse that Adam gave, according to the book of Genesis. Then the Lord asked Eve about it. She replied:

"The serpent beguiled me and I did eat."

Then the Lord drove them from the Garden of Eden and the real trouble of the human race began.

"The Best Way to Put It."

While it is known that many Biblical scholars do not pretend to take this story as a literal fact, a large portion of the Christian church has no accepted it and many churchman will doubtless take great interest in the statement of Bishop Lawrence that they may be wrong about it. The Bishop does not say, however, that they are wrong. This is his conclusion, to be explained it to the AMERICAN today, following an address that he made last night at Ford Hall on "What Religion Can Do for a Man."

"No one can say that the story of Adam and Eve in the Garden is positively allegorical and he cannot say that it is literally true. The liberty of interpretation exists, that is the best way to put it and the best way to leave it," said the Bishop.

"In these days of Biblical criticism when we are learning more about the historical statements of the Bible no one can be termed untrue to the interpretation of the narrative of Adam and Eve if he pronounces this story merely allegorical. We must remember that the first chapters of Genesis were never meant to be scientific statements and have never been so construed by the Episcopal Church.

Not a Study of Biology.

"The story of Adam and Eve serves a didactic purpose. It is not a study of biology. Many have accepted the whole narrative of creation as literally true, and others have taken the ground that the story is merely allegorical. No matter which view is taken it does not affect the teaching that is involved there.

"The same is true about the world being created in six days. There are very few who believe that these days were twenty-four-hours long as we interpret a day. Geology has taught us that this world must have taken thousands of years to get into its habitable shape.

"This is precisely the case with the story of Adam and Eve. Those who feel that it should be interpreted literally are allowed that liberty in our church. There have been periods in the past history of the church when the literal view seemed to be uppermost in the minds of many.

"I have no doubt that there are many who cling to the literal meaning even now. They have a right to take this view. It may help them in the understanding of the Bible. They are at liberty to take this stand. No one's faith in God is affected, no matter what view they take.

"There are others who are partial to the allegorical interpretation. Probably Biblical criticism has compassed this more than ever of late years. We have men in our church who take both views.

"In the allegorical view we find that the story is not without its purpose. When we come to dwell on some of the details of the beginning of the world, there are features in this view which put a stronger meaning into the narrative. More is gained from it because it is more consistent with the methods that are now being pursued to interpret the Bible according to historical criticism.

"However, no one in looking at the manner in which the Bible puts the story of creation, can be indifferent to the fact that it is simple. Even a child can understand it. The scientific man can dwell upon it. Both can get help from it in their different relations of life.

"We can look back on our childhood days and feel the interest these early chapters of Genesis inspired. The man of ripened thinking can take this simple story of creation and in his own unique way derive a benefit from it."

OLD LADIES' HOME LOSES $50,000 GIFTS

Because of improper attestation the Old Ladies' Home of Boston loses a legacy of $50,000 bequeathed to it by Emily J. Frye, according to a decision of Judge Grant in the Probate Court to-day. TEN BEEF PACKERS MUST STAND TRIAL

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Judge Carpenter to-day ruled that the ten millionaire beef packers indicted on criminal charges in connection with the formation of the National Packing Company, the alleged "Beef Trust," must stand trial on the indictment. His decision was against the packers' plea that the indictments charging criminal conspiracy were improper, inasmuch as they were under injunction not to form a trust and that if such a trust had been formed they were only liable to citation for contempt.

Gin, Properly Prescribed Valuable Kidney Remedy

The medicinal value of gin as a remedy for kidneys and bladder has been known by the medical profession for a long time and it is often prescribed.

"Six ounces best gin, half ounce Murat compound, half ounce fluid extract Buchu." This mixture, taken in doses of one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time, will quickly stop such symptoms as pain in the back, rheumatic soreness in the joints, frequent, scanty or painful urination, highly colored or scalding urine, pains in groin, dull pains in back of head, dizziness, irritability, all of which are sure signs of kidney trouble and must have prompt attention to prevent dread kidney disease such as Bright's disease, chronic rheumatism or diabetes. Your druggist can get up the gin at a good liquor store. Anyone can mix.

FOSS BARRED FROM HIS OFFICE

Just because he violated the working hour schedule of the Governor's Union today Governor Foss was barred from the office of the State House for more than a minute.

The attaches were on the job inside, but the shop rules of the Governor's Union provide that His Excellency's working day at the State House begins at 9 a. m., and supervision of the thermostat before that time renders him liable to a fine or suspension.

Governor Foss has not had time yet to study the shop rules of the union. He arrived at the State House at 8:53 to-day and was taken up in the house elevator by the veteran Robert A. Taylor. With an assured air the Governor walked to the door of his office. He tried to turn the knob. Nothing doing. Then he rattled the knob. Still nothing doing. More rattling the knob.

By this time it was 9 o'clock and Messenger Reed opened the door. In answer to the Governor's good-natured remarks about the delay he calmly pointed to Rule 56 of the Governor's Union covering the hour to begin work. Governor Foss had nothing to say.

MIDDLESEX RING INQUIRY RESUMED

The Middlesex County grand jury to-day resumed its secret sitting in the East Cambridge courthouse to investigate the so-called Middlesex County Republican ring. Some of those who appeared before the jury were: Former District Attorney Michael J. Sughrue of Suffolk County; Richard Deney Dane, son-in-law of the poet Longfellow; Robert Barns, a detective; George Fenety, Attorney General; Dr. Lowell Jull; Arthur B. Brooks, attorney, of Cambridge; George L. Berry, a Boston newspaper man, and former Speaker of the House James J. Myers.

EVANGELIST WOULD KEEP ADAM IN EDEN

Evangelist Biederwolf told his audience at Tremont Temple to-day at the noon meeting that Boston people think there is no such thing as sin and that Adam has not come out of the Garden of Eden, but out of the zoological garden. "When a man is a drunkard," he said, "Bostonians call him a dipsomaniac; when he is thin, they call him a Hottentot. Then they think that Adam did not come out of the Garden of Eden, but out of some zoological garden. Oh, do not let any one take this gospel of sin from Matthew Arnold or Charles W. Eliot."

ROBIN ARRAIGNED FOR BANK JUGGLING

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Joseph G. Robin, the bank juggler, was arraigned before Judge Swann to-day and after waiting more than an hour for somebody from the office of his counsel, William Travers Jerome, to appear, the Court directed that a formal plea of not guilty be entered for the banker on eight indictments, charging him with thefts of $247,000 from the Washington Savings Bank.

AUTO THIEF SENTENCED.

For stealing a fur overcoat and a pair of gloves, valued at $80, from an automobile, James F. Sullivan was sentenced today to the House of Correction for four months by Judge Murray in the Municipal Court. Sullivan attracted the attention of Patrolman Gallagher of the Lagrange street station by wearing ragged clothing over which he had a fine new fur overcoat.

MAYOR TALKS TO MINISTERS

Mayor Fitzgerald, in an address before the Evangelistical Association of Greater Boston in the Park Street Church to-day, proposed a change in the city charter to provide for the representation of each section of the city. He said: "One of the reasons for the apparent lack of interest displayed in the municipal election to-day now may be found in the fact that many sections of the city are entirely without representation under the present city charter, and that they desire, by abstaining from voting, to show the legislature their dissatisfaction with the present system. In the present body, East Boston, Brighton, West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and Forest Hills are absolutely without representation.

"In East Boston the matter of choosing a site for a court house and a police station, for which there is a liberal appropriation, is before the city government. But we have been unable to find that a majority of the citizens are united in their choice of a site.

Lack Representation.

"There is no representative of the section in the council, and the opinion of the citizens cannot be discovered without an endless amount of discussion. The same is the case in Brighton, where the matter of building an incinerator is under discussion. These points show the necessity for some local representation.

"I believe in a public chamber, as compared with the old group of eighty men who were in charge of city affairs till two years ago. But my suggestion is that a primary be held in each section of the city, Roxbury, Brighton, Dorchester, the North, South and West Ends, East Boston and the others, before the election, which has been still be chosen. Their work will go on the ballot, and the one receiving the largest vote at the election shall represent the city in the council. This would give a body of twelve or thirteen men. I do not know whether this is constitutional or not, but some such arrangement would surely be a good thing."

Opposes "Greater City."

The Mayor said also that on financial grounds he is opposed to the annexation of the surrounding towns into Greater Boston. "The city," he said, "conducts the fire, police and other public service departments, the library and the schools and the public parks on a far higher plane than the surrounding towns. Yet our tax rate is $2.50 lower than the average in these towns. Their annexation would mean a tremendous increase in the annual budget, and although Boston's credit is good, I do not think it is in a condition to take the extra strain."

BOSTON BANKERS CONFER WITH TAFT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Boston bank presidents, A. D. Hyde of the State National, who were among those in consultation at the White House with President Taft, have started back for Boston. They were made familiar with the results which Senator Aldrich has reached in making up the report of the Finance Commission, and were consulted about the Payne bill introduced in the House affecting an early issue of government bonds. The President wished to have the views of a few bankers upon financial questions now coming to the fore. Mr. Hyde was a classmate of the President at Yale.

MAN DRAGGED 200 YARDS BY A TRAIN

While attempting to board a train bound for Boston from Somerville to-day, an unidentified man was dragged 200 yards, and fell fainting into the arms of the gate keeper at the Union street crossing. The stranger escaped into the station and purchased a ticket to Boston, and running to the platform tried to jump on the next to the last car. He missed his footing, but held on to the train and was dragged to the above street crossing, where he let go his hold. He was taken into the gatekeeper's shanty, where he was revived. He departed for Boston on a trolley car, refusing to give his name.

CAVALIERI IN TEARS AT LOSS OF A HOME

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

(Special Correspondent Boston American.)

ROME, Jan. 9.—Lina Cavalieri-Chanler has returned to Paris. At the Grand Hotel I received the AMERICAN correspondent with her most brilliant smile. She shook hands with me as a fellow worker and made it clear that there should not be an interview, but only a friendly chat. That agreed upon the chat evolved entirely on the other subject, according to reports, but none made to her by a French publisher to write her memoirs.

"When a terrible report," said the prima donna, striking indeed a large mirror covering almost one of the walls of the room, "do you think I should accept the offer? Yes, the remuneration is tempting, very tempting, I allow, but what can I write about—at my age? Besides is there anything to tell? My life has no more secrets and it has been told over and over again."

"Still," I said, "there is your matrimonial adventure which"—

"No, no," interrupted Mlle. Cavalieri "I certainly shall not as yet write about that."

"By advice of counsel?"

Wedding an Accident

"You and no. You see I want to forget it, and the sooner the better. I regard my wedding to Mr. Chanler in the shape of an accident. Sometimes you fall and break a leg or an arm; some other time you may happen to be in a railway collision and get yourself cut; and some other times you get married, isn't it so? They are all mishaps."

"Still," continued Mlle. Cavalieri, "because Mr. Chanler happens to be an American that does not make me dislike America. Indeed I propose to go back to New York in a few days. I don't mean that I shall go there because my professional services are wanted. I feel I should go there even if no agreement awaited and even if it might prejudice me on the cherished dream of a permanent home and a quiet life."

On saying this Mlle. Cavalieri reached for her handkerchief, but she was too late. A solitary tear ran down her cheek and fell on her lap.

"Don't say anything about this," she exclaimed. "It would be construed as part of a 'scene' of what has been called a comedy, but which is really the pain fullest drama of my life."

Then the smile that had disappeared for an instant came back on her face in a minute, and she spoke at length of what she called the fascination of America."

Coming to Boston.

"Just now," she continued, "my doctor's advice is not to fatigue myself with a long journey and that makes me very sorry indeed, for I was to have come to Boston at once with a delightful company. Among it was Victor Maurel, who is at the New American hotel. I wished to lay on the lounge the whole day while my singing sisters"—

"Mary Garden?"

"Oh, no," she answered quickly, "there are others."

"Since Mlle. Cavalieri's arrival the Grand Hotel has been something like a morgue, and the pilgrimage of members of the nobility and artists had afforded a new proof of Mlle. Cavalieri's popularity among all classes of society in Rome.

Just then the door opened and a uniformed valet announced Mlle. Cavalieri's teacher of English.

Studying English.

"As you see," she said, "my life, although still convalescent, is not altogether idle. I am adding a new role, Adda, to my repertoire, and I study English to be able to"—

"Read your legal papers?"

"Yes," she continued, "and other things also. I may sing in English before long."

"In New York?"

"That is still a secret. There are many who cannot understand why operas should not be sung in English, but I am not one of these."

Mlle. Cavalieri will leave for Florence shortly, and thence for Paris and New York.

LINA CAVALIERI.

Has Strangely Disappeared.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—According to Signor Gino Centonni, who is Paolozzi's manager who arrived in New York on Saturday, Mlle. Cavalieri has strangely disappeared. According to Signor Camillo Ciantarra, the AMERICAN'S Rome correspondent, the prima donna has very much in evidence on the Italian capital.

It isn't what you pay for advertising it's what advertising pays you. Advertising that pays is the only cheap advertising; advertising that doesn't pay is dear at any price. Advertising in the AMERICAN pays best, therefore it is the cheapest.

'CHANTECLER' ON MONDAY NIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Charles Frohman is directing every day in the Knickerbocker Theatre rehearsals of Edmond Rostand's "Chantecler" in which Maude Adams will be seen beginning Monday evening.

"The flattery interpretation of the Rostand play is being entirely disregarded by us," said Frohman to-day. "The chief purpose of the American production is to stamp the whole performance with the theme Rostand had in mind when he wrote the piece. It is that man's salvation lies in the belief in his chosen work. This idea was never really brought out in the Paris production.

Follows Rostand's Idea.

"What we are particularly working for is to produce Rostand's 'Chantecler' and nobody else's. Chantecler is simply man, not the artist nor the idealist, as some say. His song is a symbol of his belief in his work. And his thought that he can raise the sun every morning is no more exaggeration of his importance to the world than the blind self-belief of many soldier captain of industry who thinks it is he who makes the world go round.

"One of the finest thoughts of the play is when Chantecler, forced to admit that his crow does not rise the sun, declares that he does at least sacrifices to the world that the sun has risen.

Great Human Play.

"But we are presenting also a great human play that tells the story of adoration pitted against love, as is now being enacted in many an American home. The Chantecler husband loves his work, is full of faith in it and has only one fear—that something may interfere with its accomplishment. Then happens the most human of things—this man meets a personal flatterer and the wife, who has always represented human will and human affection at war with each other. The woman has no part in the man's active life. She is passive and subdued. This situation can be found in many an American family. It will be our purpose to show perfectly Rostand's expression of that idea reflected the life of to-day."

MOB RIOTS AS SCHENK TRIAL OPENS

MILLIONAIRE'S WIFE ACCUSED OF POISONING APPEARS IN COURT AFTER ILLNESS.

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 9.—Remarkable scenes were enacted to-day as men fought with women to get into court for the trial of Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, who is charged with administering poison to her husband, John O. Schenk, the millionaire packer. Before dawn an army of men and women stormed the Ohio County court house.

Without delay both sides announced their readiness and the work of selecting a jury was at once started. Rapid work was done. Harry Mathews, a mill worker, was the first talesman to take the jury box, although not before Attorney Boyce engaged in a lively tilt with the prosecuting attorney. Mrs. Schenk seemed to enjoy the controversy and leaned forward listening to the lawyers with a smile on her lips.

Frank Nau, a glassworker, was acceptable to both sides and was selected as the second juror without quibbling. Judge Jordan was compelled to call a recess as the angry tilt between opposing counsel during the questioning of the next talesman, Walter Hall, a former city employe. Hall admitted that he had recently talked to Attorney O'Brien. Later, however, Hall was accepted.

The jury box was filled before 12 o'clock. The following were the other nine men selected: Frank Hilton, an employe of the Municipal Gas Works; Charles H. Heffner, a collector; R. H. Barry, gas company employe; Isaac A. Heymann, laborer; Charles C. Pelly, carpenter; J. W. Bowman, chemist; Philip Burke, railroad conductor; Edward Grimes, retired business man; John Heidefler, a glassworker.

The room where this sequel to the melodrama of love and hatred was to be staged, accommodates only 250 persons, but long before the hour of opening court a crowd of nearly 2,000 surged about the doors. It was necessary for the sheriffs office to call in the police to clear up open space through the corridors so that lawful witnesses could get into the room.

Far up in the tower of the county jail, adjoining the court house was the cell of Mrs. Schenck, and before the hour for court to open she was much concerned whether the accused woman would be able to appear before the tribunal presided over by Criminal Court Judge Lewis S. Jordan.

Anxious to Be Tried.

Mrs. Schenk had been ill yesterday and last night suffered the ministrations of physicians, but S. O. Boyce, of counsel for the defence, declared his belief that she would be able to be present. Several hours before the scheduled opening of court Mr. Boyce and J. P. O'Brien, also for the defence, held a conference. They said then that they felt sure Mrs. Schenk had improved sufficiently to appear.

"She wants to have it over with and clear her name," said Mr. Boyce emphatically. The tragic case set with all the fixtures of melodrama, has stirred Wheeling as no other case in a decade. The wealth, influence and social positions of the rich Schenk family has attracted unusual attention to the case not only in Wheeling but elsewhere.

Attired in a fashionably cut gown of the latest style in which gray and lavender shades blended, Mrs. Schenk appeared in court at 9:45 a. m. Although showing signs of recent illness, she was defiant and cast a disdainful eye about the court room which was banked with a solid mass of humanity. The prisoner had given special particular attention to her dress for the occasion. Her tailor made gown was new and her picture hat, laden with plumes and an ermine ribbon, had not been worn before. She wore a white shirt waist and a gold watch and locket.

The case will be marked by the greatest legal battle ever witnessed in the State of West Virginia. As he entered court today Prosecuting Attorney Handlan declared that the evidence which will be presented could not be successfully combatted by the defence.

Thirty-two witnesses have been subpoenaed by the State, a number of these being from out of town. Mr. Handlan declared that he is ready to show that Mrs. Schenk purchased poison herself, although he admitted that he had no witnesses who actually saw her administer it to her husband in either food or medicine.

Defence Witnesses Revealed.

Among the witnesses summoned by the defence were James McGray, Ed Swen and J. H. Pierpont of Tyler county, W. Va., Mayor George West of St. Mary's, W. Va., and Charles Farnsworth of St. Mary's, a brother of Mrs. Schenk. It was not until to-day that the names of three witnesses for the defence were revealed. It was also learned that some of the attendants from Belmont insane asylum had been subpoenaed. This developed the belief that Mrs. Schenk might adopt the insanity plea.

The defence charges a plot, and there were sensational rumors about the court building that the name of wealthy Wheeling men would be brought into the case. Private detectives from Pittsburg, who were in the employ of the Schenk family after Mrs. Schenk first fell under suspicion, were on hand, and it was declared that they had a sensation to explode.

Doubt was expressed whether John O. Schenk, the victim, would appear in court. It was said that he is still suffering from the effects of poison. Another reason given for his possible non-appearance was contained in a rumor that he members refused to allow him to appear in the presence of his wife.

Guarded by His Brothers.

According to this rumor the Schenk brothers fear that should the victim enter his wife's presence he will again fall under her influence. Schenk was desperately in love with his wife and at first refused to listen to the suspicions which his relatives entertained against her.

That the defence would show that Schenk had been an arsenic fiend for years and was in the habit of taking the drug at frequent intervals was the assertion by lawyers for Mrs. Schenk to-day.

"We know that Schenk was an arsenic fiend and we are prepared to prove it," declared Mr. O'Brien.

A panel of forty-six talesmen reported to the Court, although it was believed that this number would be exhausted before a satisfactory jury could be obtained. In the meantime the crowds collected so thickly about the corridors that it was impossible to enter the building and a squad of policemen with drawn clubs battered down the men and women. Several members of the crowd were persistent and fought back and for a time a free for all fight was waged.

Strength Comes

Not From What You Eat, But From What You Digest.

A Tablet Digests a Meal. Trial Package Free.

Most people eat most foods without discrimination—it matters little what. Few stop to think that food does for them. This is the first on the road to dyspepsia. Reckless disregard of the proper choice of foods, rapid eating and improper mastication, are the unquestioned causes of all stomach disorders from the slight ache to the malignant cancer.

There is nothing more revolting than a dyspeptic stomach—a very vat for putrefaction, sending forth its poison throughout the entire system, depressing the brain, befouling the breath, souring the taste, deadening the muscles, incapacitating the liver and kidneys for their work, debilitating the heart, choking the lungs and clogging the bowels.

All of these disagreeable and dangerous conditions are due to the improper digestion of food and the consequent assimilation of poison. What else can be expected? If the food lies in the stomach, if the poison is constipated, fermentation is the natural outcome. It shows itself in sour watery risings, belchings, heartburn and painful breathing.

There is only one way to relieve this condition. If the stomach refuses to digest your food put something into it that will. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing but digestants—they are not a medicine. They work when the stomach will not.

Each tablet contains enough pepsin, diastase, golden seal and other digestive elements to reduce 3,000 grains of ordinary food to the proper consistency for assimilation into the blood.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are absolutely pure. There is nothing harmful in them as shown in their endorsement by 40,000 physicians in the United States and Canada.

Ask your family physician his opinion of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and if he is honest toward you he will state positively that they will cure your stomach trouble whatever it may be, unless you have waited too long and have allowed your disorder to develop into cancer.

Act to-day and begin to end your suffering. A free trial package will be sent to your address upon request. The 50 cent size packages are for sale at your druggist's. F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

WASTE EXPOSED AT HAVERHILL

HAVERHILL, Jan. 9.—Alderman Rowell L. Wood, who, as a member of the municipal commission, is head of the street department, charges in a letter to his colleagues and Superintendent of Streets Ralph D. Hood that last year the city paid $1,200 for the use of four horses when the animals, according to his estimate, are not worth more than $500. He declares that if need be he will ask the county prosecutor, Harry Atteill of Lynn, to investigate the doing of the municipal council in 1910.

The charges have stirred the city and the people demand Mr. Wood seek a complete investigation.

In the letter to the council, in which Mr. Wood claims the horses kept at the city stables were owned by private individuals, he says:

"Upon investigation I have found four horses at the city stables that do not belong to the city. I am informed they belong to William Hobbs of Lawrence, Edward Ray and George L. Martin of Haverhill. I do not believe it good judgment or business-like to hire four horses at approximately $1,200 when they would not bring under the hammer more than $500. Consequently I have ordered the superintendent of streets, Ralph D. Hood, to get rid of the horses before January 15."

Alderman Wood was Mayor of Haverhill for five years, being defeated two years ago by Mayor Edwin H. Moulton. A month ago he defeated former Alderman John T. Desmond for the aldermanic berth at the head of the street department. By the charter there is a superintendent of streets, besides a supervisor in the council. The latter position is now held by Alderman Wood.

CLEARS MYSTERY OF LYNN SKULLS

Never again will Abram Brown, junk dealer, buy anything in a bag, "sight unseen." Hereafter he's got to be shown.

Mr. Brown considered it a reflection on his business ability when some time ago he bought what he was told was a couple of cocoanuts nicely tied in a paper bag. Junk dealers as a rule do not buy cocoanuts or other fruit for in their line of business, but Mr. Brown just can't resist a bargain and was so anxious to close it that he paid over the few pennies asked by the vendor without even taking the precaution to open the bag and take a look.

When he did so a short time after the sale, there were no cocoanuts in the bag. Instead there were two grinning human skulls.

"Humbug!" bitterly exclaimed Mr. Brown, not relishing the grins.

He repeated the same exclamation but with a different application when the police in the course of a raid for liquor in his store, discovered the skulls. The police scenting a mystery, possibly a double murder. They questioned Mr. Brown who was peevish because of the raid. Mr. Brown refused to enlighten them concerning the skulls. To the newspaper men he was more communicative:

"I thought they were parts of cocoanuts," he said, "and I didn't have any use for them, so I put them in the closet where they were found."

"Yes, I got them in a bag. They weren't whole skulls, and I told myself I was 'stung.' I didn't throw them away, though, because I don't believe in throwing anything away. I put them on the shelf in my closet."

"That was a long time ago. I don't remember now where I got the bag or just when."

UNIVERSITY CHORUS MEETS AT HARVARD

A university chorus has been organized at Harvard similar to those existing in Germany. The first meeting is held to-day under the direction of Professor Max Friedlander, exchange professor from the University of Berlin. Professor Friedlander undertook the work at the suggestion of President Lowell, who recently deplored the lack of taste for good music, especially among persons of culture. It is to awaken a desire for the works of the ma sters among the students at Harvard that the chorus has been formed and judging from the enthusiasm shown by the student body it is going to be a success. If such is the case other colleges throughout the country will probably follow suit and the university chorus may become as firmly established in this country as it is in Germany.

MANSFIELD AGAIN A. F. OF L. ATTORNEY

Attorney Frederick W. Mansfield of this city to-day received many letters of congratulations on his reelection as attorney for the Massachusetts State Branch of the A. F. of L. by the executive committee of that organization. Mr. Mansfield's strenuous opposition to the nomination of Governor Foss was so strongly condemned in labor circles last Fall that in some quarters it was thought he would not be reelected. The committee endorsed the effort to remove the internal tax now placed on oleomargarine.

LORIMER FIGHT BEGUN IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Senator Beveridge of Indiana to-day led in the Senate a minority report protesting against the vindication of Senator Lorimer of Illinois by the committee on privileges and elections.

Because of the taint of bribery in his election Senator Lorimer is not legally entitled to a seat in the Senate, according to Senator Beveridge's report.

"I cannot concur with the report of the majority of the committee," declared Senator Beveridge. "To my mind the testimony is conclusive that enough bribery and corruption were practiced to invalidate Senator Lorimer's election.

"In law it must be held that he was not duly and legally elected by the Illinois Legislature.

"In law Senator Lorimer must be held to have had knowledge of the transactions practiced in behalf of his election."

Resolution of Expulsion.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma introduced the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the election of William Lorimer on May 26, 1909, by the Illinois Legislature to the United States Senate was void and that he is not entitled to a seat in the Senate."

The battle forecasted for several weeks was then on.

Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire made the point of order that the resolution under the rules of the Senate must go over until to-morrow. It was overruled by Vice-president Sherman.

A parliamentary squabble ensued as to whether the Owen resolution or the Beveridge report should be first considered. Vice-president ruling that the Owen resolution should have right of way over the report.

Big Crowd in Galleries.

Senator Beveridge rose to a point of order, and the Senate overruled the Vice-president. The report was then presented to the Senate.

During the proceedings Senator Lorimer rose to a point of personal privilege and said:

"I feel it my duty to myself and to the Senate to remain in the Senate during consideration of the case. Senators need not be deterred by my presence from free and full discussion. Later I will exercise the same privilege myself."

The galleries were crowded and practically every Senator was in his seat when the Senate was called to order at noon. A death-like silence fell over the floor and galleries when Senator Beveridge arose to present his report.

The Beveridge Report.

The Beveridge report says:

"The majority report itself declares that four members of the General Assembly testified to receiving money as a consideration for their votes." Senator Hollstein testified that he received $1,000 apiece from his fellow Senator, Broderick, at two different times, the first payment being $2,000 and the second amount being $700. Representatives Beckemeier, White and Link testified to having received their money from their fellow representatives and fractional leader Fader, Link from leader Broncya lieutenant, their fellow representatives.

"The confessed bribe takers were shown to have had in their possession the bills of large denominations, unusually large sums of money, which they could not and were averse to having received the same.

"The testimony of the uncontradicted testimony of impartial and disinterested witnesses. Of the four men who repeatedly confessed to having received this bribe money, only Link was not shown to have had any money with him. The majority attack the confession under oath of these briberied men as worthless.

The Payment of Money.

"What the Senate must determine is whether it believes as a matter of fact that Lorimer himself did receive the money which they testified to having received and large amounts of which were found in their possession in bills of large denominations about the time they testified to having received it.

"This is the question often as not the conduct of a case in court of law.

"Upon this point the testimony convinces me that the members of the assembly which elected Mr. Lorimer also testified to receiving money as a consideration for their votes, actually did receive such money.

"If they actually did receive such money, from whom did they receive it? They testify that they received it from their fellow representatives and factional leader Fader, and that Fader received it from representative Wilson, and from Broncya, the fellow leader of Wilson. If they did receive it from these men these three bribe givers are as guilty as the four bribe takers."

TELLS EMPLOYES OF CITY TO BE HONEST

That all city employes must perform an honest day's work or they cannot get an honest day's pay, was strongly emphasized by Deputy Superintendent G. H. Foss in a plain talk to the men at a meeting of Franklin Improvement No. 2, K. of L. The division is composed largely of men working in the sanitary department, of which Mr. Foss is superintendent. He said in part:

"I wish to ask you to be honest and faithful in the performance of your duties, to work for the city seriously and assiduously to attain that degree of efficiency which will make every other division strive to equal."

6 OVERCOME IN NEW YORK FIRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Men made cowards by flames, dazed by fright, women and children on the fire escapes of a burning tenement house at No. 219 East Ninety-Seventh street early to-day and when the firemen at last cleared the building six persons had been overcome by smoke and two others had been hemmed in by the fire which shut out all lines from the windows.

Alfred Ilianza, seventeen, who lived on the second floor with Mrs. Dante Basalt, an aged woman, nearly lost his life in his efforts to save others. When the fire alarm sounded through the house he dashed to the upper floors to arouse the sleeping tenants. When he got back he put Mrs. Basalt on the fire escape and then waited until the long line of women and children passed either down the escape or were taken by the firemen.

Ilianza was descending himself when flames shot from a window and set fire to clothes on him. The firemen tore off the burning garments, but not before he had been burned about the face, hands and arms.

John Cherrito was a sad burned in his efforts to save others. He attempted to get into the hall, but the fire drove him back, and he got to the fire escape. He was helping women and children to the street when a burst of flame enveloped him and he was badly burned.

AGAIN RAID TRAIN ON NORTHERN PACIFIC

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 9.—An attempt was made shortly before midnight to hold up the North Coast Limited train of the Northern Pacific Railroad at Arco, a few miles from here. The train is the one which was held up and robbed by two of masked bandits last Wednesday. There were three men this time, one of the bandits tried to break into the mail car, but found the door heavily bolted. The other two mounted the engine, but were driven off by the engineer. The description of the men tally close with those of the former robbers.

A posse followed one of the men toward Seattle.

PRIME MINISTER BOSTON'S GUEST

Members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce gave a complimentary banquet to Sir Edward P. Morris, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, to-day, at the Exchange Club.

Sir Edward represented Newfoundland at The Hague during the recent arbitration of the fisheries dispute between the United States and Newfoundland, and among those who welcomed the Prime Minister was Samuel J. Elder of Boston, one of the attorneys for the United States in the case.

Sir Edward spoke in favor of reciprocity between Newfoundland and the United States. He said that the great fisheries of Newfoundland could furnish a cheap supply of food material to the United States, and that the United States in turn could buy to advantage many of the manufactured products of this country.

Weak Over-worked Women

Who are broken down and made invalids by the drudgery of never ending household cares and duties, or by over-frequent bearing and nursing of children, and many other cares, burdens and strains which the weaker sex have to bear, are deserving of profound sympathy. But while sympathy is commendable what these unfortunate women most need is a good, honest, square-deal Restorative Tonic and Strength-giving Nervine and Regulator—one compounded and carefully adapted to act in harmony with woman's peculiar, delicate, ever sensitive organization.

Who so well fitted to select, carefully proportion the ingredients and compound a remedy for the cure of these distressing and often pain-wracking weaknesses and derangements, as the carefully and thoroughly educated and regularly graduated physician who has had a long and successful experience in treating just this class of cases.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

THIS MEDICINE IS

THE ONE REMEDY Now, and for over 40 years, sold by druggists for Woman's Peculiar Weaknesses, and Distressing Ailments, gotten up by one having all of the above qualifications.

THE ONE REMEDY which absolutely contains neither alcohol (which to most Women is rank poison) nor injurious or habit-forming drugs.

THE ONE REMEDY which is so perfect in its composition and so good in its curative effects as to warrant its makers in printing its every ingredient, as they do, on its outside wrapper, verifying the same under solemn oath.

In all the above most important particulars, the "Favorite Prescription" stands absolutely alone—in a class all by itself—as woman's most reliable and trust-worthy remedy in time of sickness and distress. It is a pure glyceric extract made from American curative roots, found by long time experience most valuable in curing woman's weaknesses and derangements. The leaders in all schools of medical practice have endorsed each of its ingredients as of the best known remedies for the complicated affections for which it is recommended. These professional endorsements should count for far more than any number of lay testimonials. A booklet full of them sent free on receipt of name and address.

FIND WOMAN IN HODGE MYSTERY

Sought in all parts of the United States for eight years in connection with the mysterious disappearance of Miss Annie L. Hodge, sister-in-law of Warren T. Currier of No. 560 Tremont street, a banker, Mrs. Mary Gordon, according to a report made to the District Attorney's office at Los Angeles, Cal., has been located in Philadelphia. The Gordon woman has been traced across the country to Los Angeles and back to the Atlantic coast three times. The story is told in dispatches to-day from Los Angeles.

The finding of Mrs. Gordon, it is believed, will clear the mystery which Mr. Currier has been trying to solve the past five years. He is having mystery made a trip to Los Angeles in his effort to find the missing sister of his wife. Miss Hodge lived with Mrs. Gordon in a bungalow in Los Angeles in 1906, a short time after Miss Hodge received a legacy of about $50,000 from her father's estate. Where she was not known to have used any of the money while Mrs. Gordon made a sudden display of wealth, it is said.

Miss Hodge was the daughter of Charles Hodge, a Boston business man of considerable means. She studied music and the classics abroad and also was graduated from the Michigan State Normal School at Ypsilanti, near Ann Arbor. She finally became a teacher in Los Angeles.

Mr. Currier, when seen in regard to the report of the finding of Mrs. Gordon, said: "If this woman is found the credit belongs to the Los Angeles authorities. We shall now expect some gratifying information in the case."

CANADA PLANS NEW GRAIN ROUTE

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—It is understood that a part of the Canadian government's plan for the creation of a grain route from the Western farms to the British market by way of Hudson Bay includes grain handling facilities at Liverpool. There has been correspondence between Canadian grain producers and interests engaged in grain products by the mining operations in Saskatchewan, and the government has decided to go to extreme lengths to correct the evil.

CAMBRIDGE CHURCH WILL LOSE PASTOR

The members of the First Universalist Church in Cambridge received a surprise when the resignation of Rev. Dr. George W. Bicknell, the pastor, was read, to take effect October 29. At that time Dr. Bicknell will have completed twenty years' service with the church. He said:

"I have been connected with my church for twenty years as its pastor. In my own mind I have set twenty years as the limit. While it was with regret that I presented my resignation, I felt that with such good feeling in the board of trustees and with such unity as is in the church, it should be done now."

MRS. FOSS TURNS 76TH MILESTONE

With one son Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the other serving his ninth term in the Congress of the United States, her life partner still by her side and weathering well his four-score years and two, Mrs. George E. Foss, literally seventy-six years young and splendidly joyous in spirit, received congratulations on her birthday anniversary in her beautiful home at No. 8 Everett street, Jamaica Plain.

The three-score-and-ten years of the Jamaica have been given to her in good health and with everything that makes life acceptable, and the six additional years finds no sign of real age encroaching. With all a mother's pride in the notable achievements of her two sons Mrs. Foss is just old-fashioned enough to depict quite confidently for herself.

"We have had fifty-six happy years of our married life," she said, "and everything has been as we could have wished. The boys have given to me in good health and with everything that makes life so

CITY CAMPAIGN ENDS TO-NIGHT

Election day is to-morrow. Three members of the City Council and two members of the School Committee will be chosen. This is the last day for campaigning and final rallies will be held to-night.

There are nine City Council candidates and four School Board nominees. Under the new charter they all go on the ballot without party designations. Partisan politics are supposed to be barred now from all municipal campaigns in Boston. The candidates are all nominated by papers circulated among voters. There is not a convention candidate in this list.

The campaign which ends to-night is the most apathetic ever known in the city. Rallies have been slimly attended. No interest has been shown by the people as a whole. The most interesting question with politicians is how small the total vote will be.

There is some interest in the license question. This is because some politicians have figured it out that the vote polled will be so small that prohibitionists have a chance to make the city "dry" by stealing a march on the liquor interests.

The Candidates To-morrow.

The candidates who will be on the ballot to-morrow are:

CITY COUNCIL.

Frank A. Goodwin of Ward 1.
Thomas F. Mansfield of Ward 1.
Daniel J. McDonald of Ward 3.
Timothy J. Buckley of Ward 5.
Joseph A. Sheehan of Ward 9.
Earnest R. Smith of Ward 11.
Thomas J. Collins of Ward 13.
J. Frank O'Hare of Ward 14.
John J. Butler of Ward 18.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Mrs. Julia E. Duff.
Dr. William J. Gallivan.
Michael H. Corcoran, Jr.
Dr. Thomas F. Leen.

The most work that is being done today is to arouse a little interest in the election so that there will be a respectable number of voters at the polls. The lack of public interest on the part of the people is amazing. At a rally held in the Franklin Schoolhouse the audience comprised twelve men. Nine were policemen on duty there. A Roughan Hall rally in Charlestown drew only five voters. These meetings were attendance samples.

While neither the Democratic nor Republican organizations have been permitted to put tickets into the field the Democratic and a number of civic organizations are backing slates. Among them is the Municipal League, the Public School Association and the Good Government Association. Appeals to the stay-at-home voters show how general is the election apathy. The Republican City Committee is one organization, however, which is not trying to get voters to polling booths. It is said that it will not even have checkers or any of the other usual election day workers on hand.

Liquor Interests Worried.

But the Democratic City Commitee will have its usual force at the booths. The Democratic organization has a slate of its own and is going to try to elect it.

Ante-election estimates of the vote which will be cast to-morrow are interesting. Chairman Minton of the Board of Elections Commissioners says he does not believe the total will be more than 50,000. Many politicians predict it will not be more than 40,000. There are more than 100,000 registered voters. According to Chairman Minton's forecast half of them will stay at home.

Prohibitionists are busy. They are said to have conducted a house to house canvass to get voters to pledge themselves to vote "No" to-morrow. A number of Catholic churches in Dorchester yesterday particularly were urged from the pulpit to vote against license. The liquor interests are worried. They are busting to-day to get all the "Yes" voters they can reach to agree to vote.

The Chamber of Commerce News to-day contains an appeal to all its members to vote to-morrow. This appeal says:

"There is a lack of interest in the election which is absolutely inexcusable in view of the situation. There are important city offices to be filled, and the men who are elected to fill them the business men of Boston will go many times during the next twelve months with requests for cooperation in executing measures for the public good. Do the business men of Boston intend to have nothing to say who the men shall be who fill these offices?"

Rallies To-night.

The rallies which will be held to-night under the auspices of the Democratic City Committee are as follows:

Ward 1, New Boulevard Hall, Saratoga street; Ward 2, ward room, Armory Building; Ward 3, ward room, Bunker Hill street; Ward 4, gymnasium, Tyler street; Ward 9, ward room, Franklin Schoolhouse; Ward 13, Maynard Hall, D street; Ward 14, Flood square; Ward 17, Courthouse, Dorchester street; Ward 18, Municipal Building, Columbia road; Ward 17, ward room, Vine Street Church; Ward 19, ward room, Ellingwood street; Ward 20, ward room, Meeting House Hill; Ward 22, Tonkinside Hall, Boylston station; Ward 24, ward room, Codman square; Ward 25, Old Town Hall, Brighton.

Regarding the City Council candidates, Councilman Daniel J. MacDonald, Joseph A. Sheehan and Earnest E. Smith are indorsed by the Municipal League and Good Government Association. Councilman Timothy J. Buckley and John J. Buckley are indorsed by the Democratic City Committee. Frank A. Goodwin, Thomas F. Mansfield, Thomas J. Collins and J. Frank O'Hare are not indorsed by any organization representing all Boston, but Mansfield and Collins are recommended for election by a number of Democratic ward committees. The only Republicans among the nine City Council candidates are Goodwin and Smith.

In regard to School Board candidates, the Public School Association and the Municipal League are supporting Michael H. Corcoran, Jr., of South Boston, and Dr. Thomas F. Leen of the Back Bay and Charlestown. The Democratic city organization is backing Dr. William J. Gallivan of South Boston and Mrs. Julia E. Duff of Charlestown. Both of them served on the old School Board when it had twenty-five members.

ELKS ARRANGE PERRY FUNERAL

The Boston Lodge of Elks has completed arrangements for the funeral of Past Grand Ruler Edwin Allen Perry, the veteran Boston newspaper man, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. C. Alley, in Kansas City, Mo., on Saturday. The body will arrive in this city to-morrow, and will be taken to the Elks building on Soldiers' Field, where it will lie in state until 2 p. m. Wednesday, when the funeral services will be held. A delegation from the lodge will escort the body to Mount Hope Cemetery, where it will be interred in "Elks Rest," the burial plot of the order.

MARIE DRESSLER VERY MUCH ALIVE

WINDSOR, Vt., Jan. 9.—"Take it from me, I'm not dead. There is no more chance of me committing suicide than there is of my retirement from theatrical life."

In those brief but well chosen words Marie Dressler to-day took it on herself to deny the reports circulated from a mysterious source in Boston that she had ended her life at her Summer home here. Moreover she is real angry at the reports.

"Do I look like a person who would commit suicide?" asked the jolly actress, lately the star in "Tillie's Nightmare."

"Why, the story even got to New York and Lee Shubert was on worked up over it that he called me up on the long distance 'phone to ask me if it were true. I assured him it wasn't and in the words of Mark Twain, the rumor of my death had been greatly exaggerated."

DAUGHTER HELD FOR RICH WOMAN'S DEATH

ELLISBURG, Ky., Jan. 9.—Mrs. James Allen, a wealthy resident of this town, was found at her home choked to death to-day. Her daughter, Miss Lula Allen, has been arrested, suspected of having slain her mother.

ELKINS LEFT $15,000,000.

ELKINS, W. Va., Jan. 9.—It was learned here that the will of the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins was filed here for probate Saturday. While the value of the estate, or its disposition, has not been announced, it is said to be between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000.

MAN KILLED; TWO ARE HELD

Mystery surrounds the death of William Dzimegvich, who died at the Relief Hospital from injuries he sustained, either by falling or being thrown from the roof of the house at No. 23 Morton street, North End, to the ground below, a distance of forty-five feet. Dzimegvich was thirty years old and lived at that address. He was found unconscious on the sidewalk and died five minutes after at the hospital from a fractured skull and multiple internal injuries.

Suspected of being implicated in his death, Joseph Valacebet and Anton Bundavick are held at the Hanover street police station. These two men, the police say, admit having had trouble with Dzimegvich and were on the roof at the time when the tragedy occurred.

The police are working on the theory that Dzimegvich was thrown from the roof but for what reason they are unable to say as the two men under arrest refuse to make any statement regarding the quarrel. They are only held as suspicious persons but if sufficient evidence is secured against them the charge will be changed to that of manslaughter.

The body of Dzimegvich is at the North Grove street morgue where Medical Examiner Magrath to-day performs an autopsy in the opinion of the medical examiner the man's death was not accidental and the police are awaiting the outcome of the autopsy to conclude their investigation.

ATTEMPT LIFE OF LAWMAKER

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—That an attempt was made to assassinate Congressman Orin H. Fowler, who as State senator cast the vote which passed the antirace track gambling law and that he is in constant danger of death at the hands of gamblers became known to-day. To-night a got as far as the window of his bedroom at his home, No. 144 Keap street, Williamsburg, in their effort to murder him. A rope ladder was used.

At one end were strong iron hooks and these were thrown to the frozen stone window sill of the Congressman's bedroom on the second door of the house. One of the men stood guard while the other mounted the ladder. Mrs. Emma Berger, Mr. Fowler's aunt, heard the man raising the window and awakened her nephew.

He jumped to the window as the man scuttled down the ladder.

"One of the men cried as he saw me," said the Congressman to-day. "There goes the ——," using a vile epithet.

"I had received more than thirty letters threatening my life before I cast the vote which passed the anti-track gambling bill, but I thought they were from cranks, and that after a while they would cease. I was mistaken. The people who wrote them intended to do me harm if they could get a chance at me. Only the other night I was reaching the newspapers, but I was compelled to inform the police of the attempt of the two men to reach me in my bedroom."

Detectives from headquarters were immediately detailed to watch the home of the Congressman. For the past four days Mr. Fowler has been under guard at home and even in Congress. Commissioner Bingham has given him a permit which allows him to go armed, and he carries a revolver night and day.

"Even when I lay ill at Scottsburg during the fight against the bill," said Mr. Fowler to-day, "I received letters threatening me with death if I voted for the bill."

IS FINED $50 FOR ACCOSTING WOMAN

William Henry Sheehan of No. 166 Walnut street, Chelsea, was fined $50 in the Malden Police Court to-day for accosting women on the streets of Malden. It is alleged that between 9 and 10 o'clock Saturday night Mrs. Emma J. Rohr of Winthrop street, Malden, while on her way home from Mayor Hastings's house was stopped by Sheehan, who insisted on accompanying Mrs. Rohr. Mrs. Rohr was too frightened to scream until she neared the Hastings house when Sheehan took to his heels and ran away. Mrs. Rohr arrived at Mr. Hastings's house out of breath and very nervous. She was able to give a description of Sheehan, who was later arrested. Judge Bruce in imposing the fine said that the women of Malden do not need any escorts to see them home, and they always feel safe enough to go home without escort. Sheehan appealed and was held in $500.

BOSTON SENDS AID TO CHICAGO BABIES

As a result of the appeal she made through the columns of the Sunday AMERICAN, Miss Mabel Gillespie, secretary of the Boston Woman's Trades Union League, was able to send $150 to-day to help furnish milk to the babies of the strikers. Ten days of the 40,000 men and women affected by the cloakmakers' strike. Two checks came from women of means, for $50 each. A prominent official of the Union of Cloakmakers has told Miss Gillespie said to-day she wished to extend her thanks to the Boston women and that other contributions may be sent to her at No. 2 Tremont row. She appeals also to have all receipts of a message by Miss Gillespie stating that the money has been spent by the strikers had been exhausted, and money was immediately needed.

MANY AIDED BY LONGSHOREMEN

Reports showing that $1,250 was paid out in local sick, accident and death benefits by the Longshoremen's Protective Union of Boston during the year 1910 have been made by auditors of that organization. One hundred and eighty of its members received sick or accident benefits during the year, while ten families of deceased members were paid $75 each from the union's death fund, and eighteen men were paid the village third wife. He knew her in Sweden when she was a mere child and she came here with him as his wife. Since the marriage Borg is a railroad flagman and is a people. ROBBER ATTACKS PASTOR.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 9.—After a desperate battle in the dark with a burglar early to-day the Rev. A. J. Howell, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, in the aristocratic Sewickley suburb, was foiled in his attempt to rob the rectory. He fired with a revolver but and the thief escaped with $2,500 worth of loot.

DOUBLE POISONING IS TRACED TO A WOMAN

CUMBERLAND, Md., Jan. 9.—One arrest on the charge of murder and several others on charges of perjury are to be made soon in connection with the deaths from poison of Charles E. Twigg and his sweetheart, Grace Elsoser.

This is the declaration of District Attorney Robbs, who says the case surpasses all crimes in modern history.

Disturbed by questions why he had not brought out at the inquest the fact that Twigg bought the cyanide of potassium which caused the deaths of himself and the young woman he was to marry, the District Attorney said:

Has Traced Poison.

"My investigations have gone further than most persons have reasons to suppose. I not only have traced the poison originally to Twigg, but I have tried it just him to a woman who was in love with him and whom there is every reason to suspect of having administered the cyanide to the couple. The District Attorney Robbs, speaking of the Twigg poison case.

SAYS TWIGG CA... SURPASSES ALL MODERN CRIMS

My investigations have gone further than most people have reason to suppose. I not only have traced the poison originally to Twigg, but I have tried it just him to a woman who was in love with him and whom there is every reason to suspect of having administered the cyanide to the couple. The District Attorney Robbs, speaking of the Twigg poison case.

"In a case of this kind the greatest speed is made by going over. When I have my case properly rounded up, there will not be one arrest, but several.

"Not only do I expect to place one person under arrest on a charge of the murder of Miss Elsoser and Twigg, but I expect to place other persons under arrest for perjury. To my mind this case surpasses all crimes in modern history. It is seldom that six or seven persons know about a crime and will stick so closely to their previously rehearsed stories that an arrest cannot be made immediately after interrogating them. These are the facts in this case.

Knows the Murderer.

"I know the persons who know about this crime. They know I know them, as I have charged them privately with not telling the truth and they have informed me that if such is the case it was my duty as a public prosecutor to bring out the truth. They are absolutely supreme in their belief that they are able to defy the law for all time. If this applied on only one side of the case where certain members of a family were doing their utmost to save another member of that family from being charged with a capital crime I would not be surprised, but here we have persons closely connected with a man who has been murdered apparently endeavoring to shield the person who committed the crime."

District Attorney Robbs declared that he would have the tangle unraveled just as soon as his investigators had found the two or three persons who had full intimate knowledge of the past of Grace Elsoser. May Elsoser and Charles Edward Twigg.

Twigg Bought Poison.

The source from which the poison was obtained which ended the lives of Charles E. Twigg and Mary Grace Elsoser on the eve of the wedding, while seated in a settee in the parlor of the Elsoser home, December 13, has been found.

J. C. McKown, of Pea Pat, West Virginia, twenty-five miles east of Cumberland, declares that last Fall he sold Twigg four pounds of cyanide of potassium. McKown is the owner of the Standard Coal Company, whose ramifications combine the most extensive peach orchards in this section of the country.

McKown says he sold Twigg the poison, presumably for spraying in his own orchards. The poison was in a salt form resembling grains of starch.

HUSBAND'S JOKE LED TO SUICIDE

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Mrs. Florence Veldanz, aged 29, of No. 5,317 Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, was found dead in her home. Her husband, Charles Veldanz, a jeweler, had left the house, and they had joked with her about her having any children, thereby causing her grief. When he returned he found his wife dead with the gas jet turned on.

WORCESTER, Jan. 9.—Petrus Borg, 78, married Miss Charlotta Eliasson, 53, at his home, 14 Providence street. Since his first wife. He knew her in Sweden when she was a mere child and she came here with him as his wife. Since the marriage Borg is a railroad flagman and is a people. FOUR INJURED BY FALLING TIMBER

Five or six pieces of timber fell from a hoist at the top of the new building at the corner of Tremont and West streets to-day, and after narrowly missing several passersby, rebounded and jammed four men. One of the pieces came through the plate glass window of Bailey's candy store.

The timber was being hoisted to the top of the four-storey building, under process of construction. It was held by a chain. The chain slipped as the bundle was near the roof and about thirty feet from the ground.

Several women customers were in Bailey's candy store when one of the pieces was hurled through the window. All were badly frightened.

STOLE A SHIRTWAIST.

Mary McCormack of Bowker street, East Boston, appeared in the Municipal Court to-day charged with stealing a $5 shirtwaist from an upstown department store. The head of the house that her mother sent her to buy a shirtwaist but instead she stole one. She was placed in probation for six months.

NEVER SUSPECTED KIDNEY TROUBLE—GAINED FIFTY POUNDS IN WEIGHT.

Some time ago I was suffering from what I supposed was rheumatism. I became so bad that I could hardly get on my feet from a sitting position. I ran down in weight from 195 to 145 pounds. I tried different kinds of medicine but received little or no help. I saw Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root highly recommended for kidney trouble but I never had any idea that my kidneys were affected. I thought I would try a fifty-cent bottle of Swamp-Root and see what the effect would be. I commenced taking it according to directions and in a few days I saw that it was helping me. I used the fifty-cent bottle and then bought three more dollar bottles and they completely cured me. I have gone back to my original weight 195 pounds and I take a thorough advocate of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root as I believe it to be a remarkable preparation for what it is recommended to do.

OWEN MORAN AND AD WOLGAST PLAN FIGHT FOR TITLE

The Family Upstairs—Mr. Dingbat Changes His Mind About Moving Away---By Herriman

LANGFORD FAVORITE IN BIG BOUT AT ARMORY

The biggest bout of the week in this section to win, and that it will be a battle country comes off at the Armory A. A. that will even unless the last named is trained hard. If one or the other boxes there will not be any cry about being in poor shape.

The Boston boxer is picked to win. The best dope is that the bout will go the distance, and that Sam will add another "W" to his string.

Boston has rarely, if ever, seen such a great exhibition as the men put up at their last meeting at the Armory Club. It was a battle that went fifteen rounds, with Langford getting the decision. Jeanette put up a great fight at that time, and many thought he should have got a draw. All the men got credit for the way they did at that time it will be a bout worth while for the wife of her spending money to get the necessary postcheards. It is the first bout, by the way, that Jeanette has figured in since he met his colored rival here last June.

Good Prelims on Card.

The preliminaries are all to the good. Kenneth Salsburg and Frank Moran meet in the semi-final bout. Although they say a lot of good things about the latter he will have to be all that he is claimed to hold the former amateur champion.

Chicken Ruskin and Teddy Murphy, and Billy Dinkle and Kid Curtis, clash in the other two bouts. There ought to be enough fun to last the members a long time.

Abe Attell, the featherweight champion, has two bouts on for this week. Tonight he meets Joe Coster in New York. Attell should easily make an addition to his bank roll. Coster showed improved form in his recent bouts in New York, and the sports over there think he has a chance against the champion. It's Attell by a mile, say the wise ones.

On Friday night Attell meets Patsy Kline at Tom O'Rourke's New York sick club, and the champion will have to step some. As Kline is hitting well. The champion is too clever, however.

Packey Fights To-night.

Packey McFarland, who is again in the limelight on account of the Joe Rivers bout working to get him for a bout with their champions, meets Joe McCarthy in Kansas City tonight. If McCarthy has any cleverness and is not afraid he is likely to give McFarland a good argument.

To-night Harry Lewis meets Jim Lavis in English middleweight, who is expected to prove easy game for the American boxer. Wednesday Attell meets Johnny Dundee. Moriarity of Lowell and Fighting Nick Nelson of New York will clash in a 12-round bout that should prove to be a fast one at best.

At the B. A. A. Wednesday night the trial bouts in the different classes will be concluded, and Saturday night the inter-city matches with the New York boxers will be held. Boston is well represented in the Interclty meet, while the New York boxers are spoken of highly by critics. It looks like a good night's sport for the B. A. A. members.

Frank Klaus, the Pittsburg middleweight, who is working to get a bout with his old form so that he can have another try against Jimmy Gardner and Hugo Kelly, is slated to meet Billy Berger in Pittsburg Wednesday night. It looks easy for the bearcat, although it would not surprise many if the ultimate five middleweight boxers got another setback.

MORAN GETS MATCH WITH AD WOLGAST

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Charles Harvey, manager of Owen Moran, British lightweight, and T. E. Jones, manager of Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion of the world, have reached an agreement for a championship fight, the date of which is to be settled within sixty days. It was agreed that the boxers should weigh 133 pounds on entering the ring.

Wolgast has resumed training at his home in Colfax, Minn., in order to strengthen his left arm, which has shrunken an inch and a half in size since it was broken.

LEONARD PICKED AS COMING CHAMPION

Jimmy Quinn and Jack Leonard left here last night for Watenlelt, via Albany. Leonard, who won from Howard Smith last Friday at Thornton, R. I., looks Joe Hyland at the Grogan A. C. to-night.

Leonard is predicted as the coming lightweight champion, and has shown remarkable class up to date.

AMATEUR BOXERS TO CLASH AT CAMBRIDGE

The Columbia A. C. of North Cambridge will hold an amateur boxing tournament at its clubhouse, corner Dudley and Cedar streets, January 23. There will be three open classes, 115, 125 and 135 pounds, besides three special bouts. Nick Albenes and Gilbert Gallant will figure in two of them. Entries close January 21 with W. P. McCarthy at the clubhouse.

TITER'S STABLE HERE.

Henry Titer is wintering a dozen head at Readville which keep him very busy. He tells the AMERICAN he is especially pleased with a trotting son of Adbell, 2:23, which belongs to Colonel R. H. Stevenson of this city. Henry is sending a small consignment over to the mid-Winter sale, including a fast green mare by Bingen, 2:09¾.

BOXERS SWELL BENEFIT FUND

The greatest bunch of boxing stars ever gathered under one roof in New England will be seen in action at the Armory A. A. Friday evening, January 20, at the testimonial to be tendered to Johnny Neldon, for several years one of Boston's best known sporting writers.

The match between Jack Leonard of Philadelphia and Georgo Alger of Cambridge will be the main attraction at the benefit. Both boxers was clinched Saturday night by Matchmaker Billy Pierce of the Armory A. A. Both Leonard and Alger have been winning their bouts with amazing regularity and are rarely matched.

The complement prefers of boxing have volunteered their services and the following will act as third men in the ring: Mike O'Doherty, Jack Sheehan, Jack Fleming, Billy Pierce, Billy Leclair and Spencer Williams. Billy Pierce insists upon refereeing the bout between Jack and Mike Twin Sullivan.

The exhibition between Steve O'Donnell and "Young" Foley will have Jo Lannon as the man to see that the ancients do not infringe upon the rules.

George Tuohey will referee the wrestling bouts and other than all, Lawson and Bob Somerville, several prominent wrestlers, will offer their services.

Johnny Meehan, who is popular with several boxers, has grasped the spirit of the occasion and is handling the tickets. Nelson benefit a success.

Honor Meehan will don the gloves at the benefit and the beaming countenance of Joe Walcott will be seen in his days of yore. Pete Walker will add his little mite of acting to second the boys and Referee Desire his gratuitous services.

Those who are desiring of volunteering their services for the testimonial should communicate with Billy Williams at Pierce, Armory A. A., No. 541 Tremont street, Boston.

TITLE-HOLDER BARRED FROM B. A. A. GAMES

William J. Bingham of Lawrence, present holder of the Harvard interscholastic half-mile record—Im. 58s.—which he established five years ago and again equalled last June, will not compete for Phillips-Exeter Academy in the coming New England Interscholastic A. A. track and field championships, to be held under the auspices of the B. A. A. February 25, at Mechanics' Building, because of the age limit.

Lovers of the indoor sport were disappointed last Winter when the Boston Club was unable to display what he was capable of because of illness and were looking forward to see him making a new indoor record this season in either the 600 or 1,000.

$15,000 PURSE FOR "WHITE HOPE" BOUT

Tulsa, a hustling city in Oklahoma, has decided to put out another Carl Morris, the 238-pound giant who recently pulverized Marvin Hart in three rounds, is a real pugilist or not, one who may be regarded as a possible champion of a white race. The Tulsa Athletic Association has opened negotiations with Morris and Manager Ross, Jim Barry, Al Kubiak, Jim Flynn, or even Al Kaufman, and says that if he can secure one of the men to fight the giant the club will hang up a $15,000 purse.

ANGLING IN FLORIDA.

SPORTS of all SORTS

"AH, HA, I WONDER IF THERE IS any gentleman present who would engage me in a game of carooms," said the swell individual with a generous sauntering around in a red vest, to the assembled chair warming brigade in the basement billiard hall. Whereupon an opponent rose and bowed somewhat unsteadily from a chair, and gave due assent. Just then another swell looking dude came in, and said, "gentlemen if you will accompany me to the nearest resort I will gladly buy and sell you again." The rush to the doors and tumult resulting nearly scared them from their binges. Not one was left, but he of the red vest, and his opponent, who lost the game, and returned to his chair and dozed away.

Suddenly the first individual awoke, "Fifty," said he of the red vest, and placing his cue in the rack, majestically swept out into the frigid air.

"Bless me, this is a live one in town, the age was never worked here before, and I gladly welcome him who can come across with paying down I say, Mr. Clerk, just chalk your headstone against me."

BASEBALL FOLLOWERS ARE NOT taking very seriously John H. Taylor's suggestion that Corriga and Wood might be traded. If Carrigan would practice reliably and accompany Jake to the best cafes in the business. He is there with the goods in nearly every department, except that he can't field a ball thrown from the outfield. Daily practice would remedy that somewhat. As for Wood, he's a born ball-player, a cracker-jack pitcher if he can learn to keep his curves under control, one of the best pinch hitters, and has the making of one of the best all-around players on the team. It's dollars to doughnuts, both Carrigan and Wood will appear in the home uniform next month.

DIGGER STANLEY, THE ENGLISH aspirant for the bantam-weight honors, is over upon the Great White Way in Gotham, and very cheaply is seeking for new fields to conquer. He declares his desire to again meet Jimmy Walsh, whom he has three times met, twice in 1904 and once in 1909, although he must know that Jimmy cannot make 118, the weight that the Brummegem desires to box at. In the meantime the little English visitor should be kept very busy with Frankie Burns, on January 20, his first contest here on this side of the water, and afterwards Johnny Coulon, Willie Attell and Frank Conley will be prepared to keep the beefeater very busy.

EVERY DAY "AD" WOLGAST LOOKS more like a piker champion. After taking the lightweight laurels by a decision from Battling Nelson when Nelson was on his last legs, he signed and actually appeared nearly a year—until Moran, fresh from knocking out the pride of Britain, started for Chicago. Wolgast had to come out from under cover then, but he hustled into a match with George Memsic for February 22, and on the strength of that accepted a match with Joe Mandot for a three-cornered lightweight and it begins look like Champion Wolgast is close to the middle class.

THE BOSTON FOLLOWERS OF THE ponies were surely game in coming back to the support of Herbert Turner. They first played him false to the tune of $2,000 on him well trimmed in a great stretch struggle with Harcourt Friday, only to have him well trimmed in a great stretch struggle with Harcourt Friday, only to have him well trimmed in a great stretch struggle with Harcourt Friday, only to have

JOHNSON READY FOR JEFF AGAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 9—Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion, is ready to give James J. Jeffries a return match any time he wants it.

This declaration was made following charges made by Barney Oldfield that Jeffries was doped in his recent fight at Reno and that was the reason that Johnson had such an easy time beating him.

Johnson appeared unconcerned over the charge.

"I will fight Mr. Jeffries any time he wants to fight," the big fellow said. "I will not ask anything unreasonable except that I will demand the champion's end of the money. I am getting tired of these dope stories and am ready to sign up for another match and show them that Jack Johnson is the real champion."

From Johnson's talk it was gathered he wants a fight soon. He did not name another possible opponent, however.

SHIFTS ARE MADE IN POLO SCHEDULE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 9.—The National Roller Polo League has made a few changes in the schedule, to overcome the difficulty in the way of dates in Worcester. The game of Thursday with Providence has been cancelled to be played later. New Haven plays at Worcester Saturday night, January 14. Hugh Rorty and Harry Starkie have been added to the league staff of referees to work in Connecticut.

TOM RAFTERY SIGNS WITH WILKESBARRE

Tommy Raftery of Malden, and formerly of Dorchester, will this year don the spangles with the Wilkesbarre miners of the Tri-State League. This clever boy, who was first with the Cleveland Naps last year and later with the Kansas City Blues, received a very raw deal in the town upon the muddy Kaw. The old local favorite hit for 254 and fielded for 969 in the garden while with the Kansas City team.

BOWLING STARS MEET JAN. 23

By ED COGSWELL.

The making of the match between Bill Galway and John Ochsiper vs. Joseph Poehler and partner has been postponed from this afternoon for two weeks, the principals agreeing to meet at the AMERICAN sporting department January 23 at 5 o'clock to make all details and terms pertaining to what will be the biggest match in bowling match ever decided in New England.

Saturday night Poehler and Galway met at the Boston alleys in a friendly conference. Poehler related him his bowling arm was to bad shape from the severe cold he received in the match recently decided at the Hayward alleys. Realizing that he would be doing an injustice, not only to himself, but the public at large, to engage in a match of this importance when not in proper condition, Poehler suggested to Galway that the date of making the match be delayed a couple of weeks.

To this proposition Galway was perfect, ly willing, saying, too, Poehler would be foolish to think of bowling against Christepher and himself when not fitted to do same.

After the conference with Galway, Poehler received word from Berlin, N. H., that he was billed with Harvey Hinds to bowl in a two-man match in that place on January 23, afternoon and evening, against four of the best candlepin wielders in that vicinity. This is an engagement Poehler had previously told the promoters he would dit on call, but in order not to conflict with meeting Messrs. Galway and Christopher, at the AMERICAN office, as agreed, he phoned that on the date set he would have a representative on hand to do the business and deposit the necessary funds required.

All of which means that Boston will without a doubt, see the smartest two-man candlepin match ever decided. Poehler has informed Galway that his partner will be Chet Martel. It has come to attention in the bowling world whether Poehler was to team up with Arehle Welsh or Martel, but Poehler's statement to Galway apparently settles the matter.

And talking of matches brings to mind that Harry O'Brien's deb of the Everett Elks has aroused a bunch of friendly consipiracy. First to the fore was Charles Smith of the Medford Lodge of Elks, then came E. E. Ephilin, manager of the Malden Lodge, both being more than anxious to prove that Everett must show them before they can believe Brother O'Brien has the goods.

O'Brien told me that the 'phone at the Everett Elks' home has been constantly ringing from all the nearby lodges. He called off the names of Revere, Winthrop, Waltham, besides Medford and Malden, which were aching for battle.

HARVARD HOCKEY OUTLOOK BRIGHT

By E. V. B. PARKE.

Considering the excellent fight the Harvard hockey seven put up against the machine-like McGill team in the Arena, supporters of the Crimson aggregation are now banking on their team to go after the intercollegiate championship with ultimate success. They have good reason for this view.

While Harvard men had hoped for a victory over the Canadians, in most respects they could not have left the Arena anything but satisfied with the showing of their pets, for McGill played the game of their lives and showed up in far better form than did the fast St. Michael's team, which is supposed to be the Canadian champions.

Harvard fell down in but one respect, and that was on stick work, the Crimson players being very shaky most of the time in this department and below the form which they usually display. This was probably due to the speed which they were required to show to combat their rivals. This is excusable.

At all events the hardest game of the year is undoubtedly out of their hands and from now it should be pretty fair sailing. Wednesday evening Harvard meets the St. Frances Xavier team from Nova Scotia, and then will work hard until next Saturday, when they meet Columbia, which seven should prove a fairly easy proposition and give the Crimson a good practice game. This will be the first game Harvard plays in the intercollegiate championship series and should enable Harvard to come together strongly with the game on Feb. 4, which played with Columbia in New York; next Saturday evening, and meets Exeter the game following that with Columbia in Boston.

Another intercollegiate game will be played here this week, the first of the series in Boston that between Dartmouth and Yale, and from the previous showing of the two teams Yale should have it all her way on Saturday evening.

In the intercollegiate games Harvard should have a distinct advantage over her rivals, in that she has a host of good substitutes that may be sent in to relieve the regulars. In a hockey game a fresh, although poorer player, is usually better than a good but tired player.

It isn't what you pay for advertising, it's what advertising pays you. Advertising that pays is the only cheap advertising; advertising that doesn't pay is dear at any price. Advertising in the AMERICAN pays best, therefore it is the cheapest.

FOOTBALL IS DROPPED FROM COLLEGE SPORT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—George Washington University will not be represented on the gridiron hereafter, according to a notice received by Captain-elect Wayne Barr of the 1911 football team from the board of trustees of the university.

The athletic council has been abolished and it is believed the institution has decided to eliminate all forms of intercollegiate sport. Financial difficulties of the football team, it is said, brought about the action of the board of trustees.

JAPANESE NINE MAY PLAY CORNELL TEAM

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 8.—A Japanese baseball team may be seen in Ithaca next Spring if negotiations now under way are successful. The Cornell Athletic Association has received communication from the manager of the baseball team of the Imperial University of Kyoto, requesting a game with the Cornell baseball team some time in May. This Jap team is completing a tour of the United States next Spring, planning a series.

DOVES CAPTURED ANOTHER BOOBY

Here is some of the strike-out and base on ball dope of the National League passed out by the Secretary of the League, Harry Pulliam:

The Boston Nationals, besides landing in last place 1910, captured another booby prize. They reached first by the base-on balls route just 75 less trips than any other team. The old Doves walked only 538 times, while Brooklyn, next on the list, captured 434 passes. The St. Louis Cardinals, strange to say, were the champion walkers, with 655 bases and then Giants with 642.

Brooklyn, however, fanned most—760 times. St. Louis nearly offset its base-on-balls record by running second in strike-outs, 581—Boston had 540.

Sweeney was the Doves' champion walker, with 61 bases on balls in 147 games. Collins was second, with 43 and Sheen third with 42.

Beck, he of the busy war club and the ivory cranium—headed the strike-out lads with 55 of them in 153 games, showing that Beck either smashed the pellet or missed it altogether. He lacked science in batting, as elsewhere. He walked but 19 times.

Huggins of St. Louis was the champion base-on-balls artist in the league. He walked 116 times in 151 games and Johnny Evers fooled the pitcher 108 times in 125 games. Magee of Philadelphia ran third, walking 94 times in 154 games.

Hummel of Brooklyn was the champion "strike-out kid" in the league. He fanned 81 times in 153 games. Wheat, also of Trolleytown, passed the pelter for an out 80 times in 156 games. Bescher of Cincinnati passed it up 75 times in 150 games.

BROWNS TO SELECT MANAGER WEDNESDAY

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 9.—The baseball situation continues in a state of uncertainty as well as lethargy. There has been no particular aggressiveness on the hurlers in the way of taking over the club or appointing a manager, so that Presidents Johnson and Comiskey have communicated at different intervals with Messrs. Hedgman and Ewing. Colonel Hedges says that nothing will be done until Wednesday and the grand ultimatum may surprise the whisperers that are now disseminating so much unreliable news.

WILL REPRESENT U. S. IN FRENCH MARATHON

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—John Kalins of Chicago was advised today that he had been selected to represent America in the French marathon race to be held in Paris July 24. A Chicago runner was picked by a voting contest among marathon runners throughout the United States.

CORNELL RUNNERS AT THE B. A. A. MEET

ITHACA, Jan. 9.—E. S. Mcarthur and T. S. Berna, the runners, and E. H. Magner, the hockey team captain, who is also the captain of the baseball team will probably form part of the strong white squad to be sent to the B. A. A. games February 11 at Boston.

MELVIN SHEPPARD IS BEST POINT WINNER

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Melvin W. Sheppard, the great middle-distance runner, was the strongest point-getter for the Irish-American A. C. in 1910. The annual report shows that he gathered 122 points. Martin Sheridan was second, two points behind, and D. F. Abearne third with 110.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

$25,000 POLICY TAKEN ON HORSE

With the issuing of policies of insurance, for the approximate amount of $25,000 upon the life and limb of Bob Douglas 2:04½, the famous Boston stallion, who ranks as the greatest in America, with the exception of The Harvester, 2.01, the final chapter will be passed to the sending from this country of one of the world's premiers of the light harness turf, whose departure is declared to be one that will surely be deeply regretted in the years to come.

John Spiar, the famous American turf sage, who is still in this city, plans to send the great gray son of Todd, 2.14¾, immediately to New York, from which point he will be shipped across the sea, next Saturday. Every comfort and luxury will be provided, that Bob Douglas may reach the Vienna course in the same grand shape he enjoys to-day at the Johnson farm.

MUTT-JEFF AWAY; BACK TO-MORROW

MUTT and Jeff decided not to leave the house to-day on account of the weather. Then, too, they need a rest after their strenuous holidays. However, they will cut up a few antics for AMERICAN readers to-morrow, and Bud Fisher has promised to slip one over that is funnier than anything that has gone before. Watch out!

The Eternal Will

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner

THERE is no thing we cannot overcome.
Say not thy evil instinct is inherited,
Or that some trait inborn makes thy whole life forlorn
And calls down punishment that is not merited.

Back of thy parents and grandparents lies
The Great Eternal Will. That, too, is thine
Inheritance, strong, beautiful, divine,
Sure lover of success for one who tries.

Pry up thy faults with this great lever Will,
However deeply bedded in propensity;
However firmly set, I tell thee firmer yet
Is that vast paw that comes from Truth's immensity.

Thou art a part of that strange world, I say.
Its forces lie within thee stronger far
Than all thy mortal sins and frailties are.
Believe thyself divine, and watch and pray.

There is no noble height thou canst not climb.
All triumphs may be thine in Time's futurity.
If, whatsoe'er thy fault, thou dost not faint or halt.
But lean upon the staff of God's security.

Earth has no claims the soul cannot contest.
Know thyself part of that Eternal Source,
And naught can stand before thy spirit's force.
The soul's divine inheritance is best.

The Proofs of Love

By DOROTHY DIX

THE other day the newspapers printed a little comedy that shows how much grander real life is than anything the humorists ever imagined. According to the story, a young woman in this city is in love with a youth who had planned to go back to Germany to spend Christmas with his family. The girl did not approve of this plan. She wanted her merry Christmas with her sweetheart on this side of the water. She begged, pleaded and cajoled to no purpose.

The young man was obdurate. It was his Fatherland for him. He bought his ticket, had his baggage sent down to the ship, and blithely started on his trip, only to be arrested as he set foot on the gang plank of the steamer. The girl had charged him with having stolen $150. He protested his innocence, and as soon as the ship pulled out into midstream the young woman flung her arms around his neck and began madly kissing him, declaring that the charge against him was false, that she had never taken a cent of her money, and that the reason she had thus arrested him because she couldn't bear for him to go away and leave her, and she knew of no other way to keep him.

Isn't that enough to knock the little red cap off of his perch?

Was His Vanity Flattered?

What do you suppose that man did as he thought of his forfeited passage money and his brand new steamer trunk voyaging across the rolling deep while he remained in this city.

Of course no gentleman will ever lay his hand in anger but kindness upon a woman, but there are times when he would like to, and if under such provocation as this he did nobody can blame him. Unhappily we are not informed as to the subsequent proceedings, but the chances are that he took the whole matter as a proof of how desperately in love the girl was with him, and his vanity was so flattered thereby that he forgave her on the spot and didn't even scold her.

This little incident is an amusing illustration of the queer standards we set up by which to judge not only our own affection, but that of others for us. The real tests of love are as simple and accurate as the rule of three. They are unselfishness and service. The man that really loves a woman puts her happiness before his own, and his greatest pleasure in working for her. He surrounds her with tenderness. The woman who really loves a man has no thought of herself; only of what is best for him, and she finds no drudgery in doing even the meanest task if it is for him.

The Real Proofs of Love

But, curiously enough, these genuine proofs of love are passed over by most people in favor of spurious and spectacular tests that really mean nothing. You never hear any one say, for instance, how devoted Mrs. Brown is to her husband, because she does her own housework to save the price of a servant, and in wearing her last year's hat without a murmur, because she thinks he is working too hard and wants him to feel that he can afford a gold-Winter vacation.

On the contrary, everyone says how frantically in love Mrs. Perkins is with her husband because she spends half of her time marcelling her hair and manicuring her hands so as to keep them in a nice, squeezable condition and always dresses up in her prettiest frocks so that she will look attractive to him.

Does the man who gets hump-shouldered and old before his time, slaving to provide his wife with frills and furbelows, get any credit for giving proof of being inspired by a grand passion? Not at all. The man who is pointed out as an ideal lover to his wife is the one who makes pretty speeches to him better half and very likely lets her take in boarders to support him.

Selfishness Not Love

And the queer part of the situation is that we accept these absurd standards of value in love ourselves. Who has not known men who actually enjoyed being henpecked half out of their lives, because they considered that that was wives' petty tyrannies showed that their spouses were always thinking of them and anxious for them? Who has not known a man whose career in life has been wrecked by his wife's refusal to let him go away from her for a few months, yet the man took this evidence of monumental selfishness on his wife's part as a token of her great devotion to him, instead of realizing that it only showed that she was incapable of affection for any one but herself?

It is also common to hear a poor, sickly little woman who needs rest, or change of air and scene, brag that her husband loves her so well that he can't bear to be parted from her long enough to let her have the Winter in the South, or the Summer in the mountains that would save her life, or that she has to do most of the cooking because her husband is so fond of her that he thinks that just her touch makes the food taste better.

The Ultimate Insult

These women do not stop to consider that real love would make a man willing to make any sacrifices to save his wife, and that he would eat any kind of servant girl food forever before he would have her dear hands worked beyond their strength.

Jealousy is in reality the ultimate insult that men and women can offer each other. It is an open accusation of one's doubts and suspicions of another, and yet it is almost universally regarded as a proof of love. A man is rather flattered when a woman is never more sure that a man really and truly loves her than when he gets green-eyed if she speaks to another man.

Truly, as Puck says, "what fools we mortals be"—especially in love.

MADAME X

A Great Emotional Story of Mother Love, Novelized by J. W. McConaughy by Special Arrangement With Henry W. Savage from Alexandre Bisson's Powerful Drama.

Copyright, 1910, by the H. K. Fly Co

Begin reading this thrilling and dramatic story to-day. It is not a long story, and a large installment will be printed daily. A complete synopsis of the opening installments is printed below.

Synopsis

LOUIS FLORIOT, deputy attorney of Paris, for two years had striven to crush the memory of his love for his wife. Two years ago she had fled from his home with a friend whom he had trusted.

He had only his little son Raymond to live for, and the critical illness of the infant had nearly wrecked Floriot's health. The crisis had been successfully passed, however.

During the infant's illness Floriot had been greatly comforted by Mme. Varenne, a sprightly young widow, sister of Dr. Channel, an intimate friend of Floriot, who had cared for the child and successfully brought him through the fever.

Dr. Channel rallies Floriot about his lonely life and suggests that he marry again, intimating that his sister might make a pliable spouse. Floriot then tells of his wife and his struggle to crush out her memory.

While Dr. Channel and Floriot are in the child's sick room, there is a knock at the door and the maid admits Jacqueline—the runaway wife, who had just learned of her child's illness and has returned to beg that she may see him.

Floriot enters, at first not recognizing his wife. When he does he orders her from the house.

She begs forgiveness, tells of her deep love for her husband despite her actions to the contrary, says she never would have married had she not neglected her and thrown her into the company of their mutual friend, and says she never had any love but for him.

Floriot is greatly affected, being unable to conceal the fact that he still loves his wife.

Still, he orders her away and tells her to go back to her lover.

"He is dead," she whimpers.

The tenderness that had been growing in him knew he had been deceived. "So that is why you have returned," he says.

Jacqueline realizes she is losing her advantage. But she spurs herself to a renewed plea.

M. Noel, who had disappeared and was reported to have killed himself, is found alive and tells Channel and Floriot the cause. He had loved a woman, but she had chosen another. He wanted to forget. When he learns of Jacqueline's disappearance he is greatly wrought up and curses pungently.

Floriot tells Noel how he had saved Leverlin from conviction with other members of the Finance Department, and that Leverlin is the man who betrayed him and fled with Jacqueline. Noel still urged that Jacqueline be rescued.

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued)

The Search Begun

FLORIOT would not eat, but his friend insisted that he drink several cups of coffee and two small glasses of brandy. When he saw his eye brighten and a faint touch of color return to his pale cheeks Noel suggested as gently as possible:

"There is one more place that we ought to visit before we do anything else, Louis."

Floriot glanced at him with questioning dread. Noel read his thoughts and nodded.

"I don't think she would do it—as long—as long—as the boy is alive, and I don't want to alarm you needlessly, but we might as well be sure," he continued.

Both had feared all night that when Jacqueline reached Paris and realized that she was alone in the world with no place to go and no one to turn to for aid, comfort or advice, she might have thrown herself in the Seine. They were going to the morgue to see if her body had been found.

They walked through the rows of the silent figures wrapped in white sheets, and as the door of every woman was uncovered Floriot gave a gasp and closed his eyes before he dared to look. The body they dreaded to find was not there, and they silently thanked God as they came out into the sunlight again.

Then they hastily formed a plan of campaign. Noel went out to the house in Passy to get a photograph of Jacqueline that he had in his bag. It was two years old, but it was better than none. He was to meet Floriot at the office of the Chief of the Parisian police.

The Chief knew the young Deputy Attorney very well, and had a deep admiration and respect for him. He did not ask any useless or embarrassing questions when Floriot told him what he wanted. Being a good policeman, he already knew much of the private life of the man, and it was easy for him to fill in the gaps in Floriot's story. Noel returned with the photograph and he promised that he would have a number of reproductions made and put his best men on the search.

Leaving the office of the police chief, they made the rounds of all the hospitals without learning anything of a woman answering Jacqueline's description. Then Noel insisted that there could be nothing more that day, and that they had better go out to Passy, have a good dinner and a night's rest.

The Hunt in Vain

All the way home, at dinner, and throughout the evening Noel talked to his friend with a buoyancy he did not feel. As the day wore on, he realized what a task they had undertaken, and already he began to feel that if they succeeded in finding her it must be due more to chance than otherwise. But he had no idea of abandoning the search. In his heart he told himself that he would devote his life to it if necessary.

And Floriot? Like the Jew of the legend the spirit of unrest had already entered his soul. He made a hundred vain and impracticable suggestions in the course of the evening, each one inveiving useless activity on the part of himself and his friend. But the manifest futility of adopting any of his plans did not weigh with him. He wanted to be doing something. Noel finally dragged him with Burgundy and persuaded him to go to bed with the assurances that the Chief would have her or them on the trail in the morning.

"Noel, old man, I don't want to sleep;" was Floriot's response. "What do I want sleep going, as I suggested, down to—"

"Tut, tut!" interrupted Noel, testily. "What have you employed the police for? Go to sleep, old man! It'll be all right by to-morrow night!"

And with a final handshake he left him. In spite of his protest that he did not want to sleep, a few explosive words had barely uttered Floriot two minutes after he touched the bed. Exhausted Nature seized the opportunity to make up for the drains of more than two weeks, and he was still sleeping heavily when Noel came to call him shortly after noon.

"I've just come from the Chief's office," said Noel, brightly, after he had listened to and put aside Floriot's reproaches for not calling him.

He did not mention that he had been to the morgue again.

"And what does he say?" demanded the other sitting up with eager anxiety. Noel avoided his eyes.

"He hasn't anything definite to report, but he assures me that it is only a question of hours," he replied, cheerfully. "He has telegraphed to the frontiers and all the seaports, and unless Jacqueline has left France we have her just as surely as if she were in the next room now!"

"Left France! She can't have done that!" exclaimed Floriot.

"It's hardly possible in that length of time," agreed the other, "and for that reason I think that our friend the chief will have news for us by to-morrow night for sure!"

Jacqueline Had Disappeared

But there was no news "to-morrow night" nor the next night. The nights grew to weeks and the weeks to months and the months to years, and there was never a trace of the missing woman from the moment she left the Passy station.

Noel, true to the vow he had sworn the day after she left, spent his life in the search for her. He had ample funds, and Floriot was well provided for in the goods of the world. All the capitals of Europe and the large cities in America, aided by the police. He made friends with the demi-monde and the "submerged" of many places. He employed women of Petersburg and the ladies of the Tenderloin knew him equally well. But it was all in vain. Jacqueline had disappeared.

Floriot could not abandon his work for the sake of his boy, but he took from it all the time he could spare. He labored now without zest and without ambition. The one thing in his life that seemed worth while was to find his wife.

He and Noel wrote to each other constantly when the latter was away—advising, suggesting, planning. All the time that he could take from the courts he employed in roaming about Europe while Noel was on the other side of the world. And like the slab of the cross to the ancient Jew, a hundred times a year he thought that in the glimpse of a profile or the sound of a woman's voice behind him, he had reached the end of his quest. And each disappointment was more bitter than the last.

Floriot at home there was no escape. For as Raymond grew up it became more evident every year that his dark, passionate eyes, smooth forehead and dark curly hair were his mother's. The firmly cut jaw and mouth and straight, high-bred nose came from his father.

He was growing into a splendid young man, as clean mentally as he was physically. He was the one joy of his father's life and he tried to make up in his love what the boy missed in not having the mother that had been driven away.

He had an inherited taste for the law, and at school he was a pronounced success in that line. He was prouder when the young man—just turned twenty-four—was admitted to practice in the courts of France.

Floriot had been transferred from Paris to Lisbon and from there to Bordeaux. He was appointed president of the Toulouse Court just before Raymond became a full fledged lawyer. This made it necessary for father and son to part because the son could not practice in his father's court. It was therefore decided that Raymond should remain in Bordeaux with Mme. as housekeeper. She had been the nurse of the boy's childhood, had raised him and grown very fond of the service. She was a fixture for life in the Floriot establishment.

Absent from home now and then and never seen heard of any of the characters in this story—excepting M. Floriot, for whom they entertained a marked respect and hearty dislike although he did not know of their existence—sat down one morning and penned a letter, the effect of which was far beyond their foresight or wildest imagination.

CHAPTER VIII.

"Confidential Missions"

IT was nearly twenty years after the disappearance of Jacqueline that M. Robert Henri Perissard and his very dear confrere, M. Modeste Hyacinthe Merivel, received their office in a little street not very far from the Palace of Justice, about 9 o'clock in the morning, were their custom to arrive.

They always took a cab in going to and from their place of business for the same reason that the cab never took them to the door of their residence. And, for the same reason, their residence was in one of the worst streets of Montmartre. One maintained an address in the Faubourg St. Honore and the other in Rue St. Denis, but neither could ever be found there.

Their little home was beautifully furnished, but it was on the fifth floor of a squalid-looking building, and scarcely a soul in the world besides themselves knew of its existence. They did not look after it at all like residents of the vilest quarter of Paris, for they were both persons of so blamelessly respectable that it would have aroused the suspicions of a clever detective.

All this may seem strange, but in their case it was necessary. It was quite necessary that their mission in life to avenge all unpunishable wrongs of the land and sea. They ferreted out evil-doing that escaped the vigilance of the police, and quietly and levelly fined the evildoers.

It was a lucrative business, but they stared not life up to anything like the full strength of their income. They also attended to this business, and gentlemen who engage in that business are not frequently found in queer places decorated with bullet holes or knife cuts in the walls.

Then, besides, the natural guardians of the community, the police—they frequently brutal enough to call them "blackmailers" and send them to prison for long terms, so you can see that only gentlemen of great courage and perspicacity can ply the trade successfully.

M. Merivel, the elder of the two, had in conversation a mixture of pomposity and unctuous humor that was truly edifying.

He was about medium height with a rotund, well fed body, busily side-whiskers, and little porcine eyes in a fat face. To any one not a close observer of men he would have taken him for a prosperous banker.

His companion, M. Merivel, was the larger and younger man. He affected an even more roughed and pitifully respectable garb. He had oily black hair and hoary locks. He wore gilded with a deep, heavy voice, though not so glib a tongue, but it was impressive to hear him buck up his co-worker's statements with rumbling affirmatives.

The Blackmailers

The occupation in which they dealt are not hard to come by—especially in continental Europe. There is scarcely a wealthy family that has not some secret that would rather the world did not know. For men with the shrewdness and insight, which they had enough, a little tact and careful system of espionage and research and a little judicious bribing of servants and, lo! The thing was done!

Lately their business had been remarkably successful and was spreading rapidly—so rapidly that they had found it necessary to take in another man to look after their interests in Lyons, where they had two or three "most promising affairs," as M. Merivel would have put it. And now they felt the need of a shrewd man in Bordeaux—shrewd and courageous, for they had told out a "subject" there that was so dangerous that neither cared to handle it in person, and yet so lucrative that it could not be abandoned.

The man they had proved that he was just the genius needed there and the partners agreed that they would "never look upon his like again." For weeks they had been aware of reckless and unscrupulous blackguards avowing they knew—and knew to be at that time out of prison—but they could get no hold upon one who, they were sure, had the ability they required in a helper.

It was in this dilemma that M. Perissard began spending the morning's mail, sighing heavily, while his associate busied himself with a collection of society papers from various capitals in the hope of unearthing a profitable hint of threatened scandal.

His Belated Honor

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

She met the shade of her dear departed ancestor.

THERE had dwelt in Shade Land for many years a meek little Shade who, among all the other Shades snubbed and slighted and crowded into a corner; of no importance when on earth, humility attended him when he no longer existed.

For over a century (as men count time on earth) he had been made to feel his own insignificance, when one day a Shade in Woman's Shape, having that bustling, domineering air of having been Somebody when on earth, blew into Shade Land and asked for the little Man Shade.

It was hard to find him; he had been made to feel his meekness so many years that he had fallen into the habit of hiding in a corner of Nowhere, but when he was dragged out, and the important Woman Shade saw him, she fell upon his neck.

"My distinguished ancestor," she exclaimed. "I admire and revere you!"

The Shades who had buffeted and scoffed at the meek little Shade stood around in amaze. They couldn't understand!

"You are my beloved ancestor," said the Important Woman Shade, blowing a kiss on the meek little Shade's forehead, "who fought in the Revolutionary War! Had it not been for you I could never have been a Daughter of the American Revolution. I owe all my importance on earth to you!"

Whereupon the Important Woman Shade exhibited a D. A. R. pin that cost more than her meek little Revolutionary ancestor had ever been able to earn in all his life.

Desperate Desmond

Claude and Rosamond are happy in the belief that they have eluded Desperate Desmond. They little know the cowardly cur is sneaking through the jungle grass in front of them, luring the elephant and a bag of peanuts. But whither is he leading them? Have patience, gentle reader; you shall know anon.

So long as there are peanuts in sight, the elephant will follow wherever Desperate Desmond leads. Up hill or down hill, all the same to him. All the food lovers can do is to hold on for dear life and let the elephant carry them to where he is going. They do hope that he'll get there before dinner time.

Did you ever taste bananas plucked right from the tree? They're not a bit like those you buy off a push cart. You can't knock peddlers, far be it from us. They do the best they can with the stuff they sell, you don't have to buy it. It is of which has nothing to do with our story.

Our should never throw banana peels on the ground. It's dangerous. But pop slipped, too. They are few and far between in the jungle, and Claude takes a chance. Now we would have been obliged to ring the curtain down. They always do when the villain dies. Please observe that the scene threw those peels where Desmond would has changed. We are now in the midst of the burning desert sands.

When Desmond slipped, the elephant right down on Desmond, and right down on Desmond, and A little more and he would become a mere mound. This is where Desmond planned to leave Claude and Rosamond to perish of thirst or heat prostration, but the tables have been turned, and the car will have to take his own medicine. His horrible suffering will be graphically described in the next picture, out to-morrow. Whatever you do, don't miss them.

Manicure Lady an Author

SHE ALMOST HAS HER STORIES ACCEPTED

"I WONDER if it is so hard after all to write a magazine story or a novel," said the Manicure Lady, as she looked out of the window and watched the thousands skimming over the sloppy pavements and sidewalks.

"I ain't ever given it much thought," said the Head Barber. "Some of the short stories and novels I have read, though, seem mighty easy to write. But I guess you gotta be there with the old gray matter if you ever get them editors to getting up and sending for you. It's out of my line, kid. What about it?"

"George," said the Manicure Lady, mysteriously, "can you keep a secret?"

"I never blabbed many that was left to my tender care," replied the proud Head Barber. "If everybody in this world was as tight-lipped as I am, there wouldn't be any restaurants. But don't spring it if you don't want to. Remember, kid, I ain't coming after information."

"Well, George, I have known you for a long time, and I think I can trust you implicit. I have wrote two stories. Oh, you don't need to grin—both of them have been accepted by a magazine editor. Anyhow, he told me that as soon as I had them typewritten and sent to him he would consider them, and would very likely use them. That's about the same as counting the money, ain't it?"

"I don't want you to think, George, that I have came to this literary success without a lot of plugging. For five years I kept my mouth shut and wrote and wrote and wrote. Nearly everything that I wrote I read over and tore up, and the few pieces that I didn't turn up I sent to some of our best young magazines. The pieces came back like boomerangs, walloping me pronto and self-respect something fierce. But I kept plugging, and now I think I have two swell works of fiction. I'll tell you about both of 'em if you just as soon listen. Goodness knows, George, both of us has plenty of time to talk and listen, the way business is all to the Republican. I got six new orange sticks yesterday, and they are all in the maiden class, just the way they was when I trotted them in here.

"Oh, well, into each life some bail must tumble, and I ain't whining. About my first story—He one that I like the best—it is a Southern story, full of the romance and mystic legends of the land below the Masonic and Dix line. The heroine, a Southern girl of rare loveliness, was born and reared in Indiana."

"Indiana ain't in the South," broke in the Head Barber. "I ought to know, I got a cousin and two aunts that live there, and all their men folk fought under Grant."

"I don't care about none of your relatives," said the Manicure Lady. "This heroine of mine lived on the South Side in South Bend, Ind., and if that don't make her a Southerner nothing can. What she falls in love with a Yankee from Maine, and just as they are about to be married the Yankee lover finds her in his arms and says: 'Dearest, if there is any favor in the world that I can grant you'—and the minute she hears the word 'Grant,' she breaks from his embrace and gives him not his engagement ring. I think it's a swell ending, don't you, George?"

"I think it is awful and all through," said the Head Barber. "I see a couple of live ones coming, kid, and I guess you'll have to bill me about your other masterpiece later on. Don't get discouraged, kid. There's lots of chance yet for you to become a regular shorter, like Carry Morrell and the Duchess."

To-day's Best Story

A YOUNG preacher who was staying at a clergy house was in the habit of retiring to his room for an hour or more each day to practice pulpit oratory. At such times he filled the house with sounds of fervor and pathos, and emptied it of most everything else.

Phillips Brooks, so the story goes—danced to be visiting a friend in this house on day when the budding orator was holding forth.

"Gracious me!" exclaimed the Bishop, starting up in assumed terror. "Pray, what might that be?"

"Sit down, Bishop," his friend replied. "That's only young D. practicing what he preaches."

When "Bunny" Got Busy

By KENNETT HARRIS

"BUNNY" WICKS, at the tie counter, looked over to Miss Pearl Ferguson, at the notions, for the twentieth time that morning, and smiled the same nervous smile that he had smiled twenty times before, moistening his lips with his tongue thereafter. Miss Pearl Ferguson frowned and patted her sleek head of black curls for the twentieth time, but the frown was not in sanity one else the nod was distinctly one of encouragement. At the same time the young woman muttered with great intenseness, "Do you fool!" Of course, "Bunny" didn't hear that.

He wouldn't have accepted it if he had. "Bunny" resented that which in part accounted for the nickname that had abbreviated Bertrand Edgar Wicks, Ph. D., to, mud solely, in conjunction with Wicks, for purposes of signature.

His acquaintance with Miss Pearl Ferguson dated back about six months. It had been very gradual, beginning with the discovery that they took the same street car for the first stage of their respective ways to what they called "home," but it had advanced far enough for Miss Ferguson to tell "Bunny" what she thought of him.

"You give me a pain, Mr. Wicks," she said. "The way you take what them sappy kids give you in Our Uncle. You ought to be the first thing to-morrow morning. You hear me, don't you?"

"I guess maybe I will," said "Bunny." He did not, however. Not the next morning, nor the morning after that, nor many mornings, and it was not until Miss Ferguson had frowned and nodded at him for the twenty-second time.

"Bunny" strode on to the office at such a pace and with such an air of confidence that a dozen of the clerks turned their heads to look at him and wonder. In ten minutes he came back almost as briskly and paused a moment at the notions.

"How about it?" asked Miss Ferguson, breathlessly.

"They're going to think it over and let me know," answered "Bunny." "I told 'em I'd like to have an answer by to-morrow," he added.

"Fine!" commented the young woman, glowing.

"Bunny" crossed over to the tie. A few minutes later the nominal head called "Mr. Bunny" made no response until he had been called the second time. Then he said "My name is Wicks, Mr. Spooner. I'll thank you to call me by it."

The nominal head looked at him in amazement, yet not closely enough to notice that "Bunny's" knees were shaking. He only saw that the young man's eyes were steady and defiant. "Got a date with somebody, Mr. Wicks?" he asked, sarcastically.

"Yes, sir," replied "Bunny," calmly. "But I don't think I'd have any trouble getting one if I wanted it. I think I can go out any morning and have from five to twelve per. Less than anybody, and you get less than I've got in the last year."

"Come off."

"Mr. Spoonbeim knows it if you don't," she snapped. "Say, what you need is somebody behind you with a good swift hoplck. Go into the office the first thing to-morrow morning and have them raise you to twenty and see what they'll say. Stand right up to 'em and see if they don't fall for it."

"Go Get That Raise!"

"I know what they'll say," declared "Bunny." "They'll say, 'Go down to Mr. Frouy and ask him to give you your time.'"

"That's all right, too," said Miss Ferguson, "but it might be a good thing for you. All you've got to do then is to hustle out and get another job at twenty-five. Now you go in the first thing to-morrow morning. You hear me, don't you?"

"I guess maybe I will," said "Bunny." He did not, however. Not the next morning, nor the morning after that, nor many mornings, and it was not until Miss Ferguson had frowned and nodded at him for the twenty-second time.

"Bunny" strode on to the office at such a pace and with such an air of confidence that a dozen of the clerks turned their heads to look at him and wonder. In ten minutes he came back almost as briskly and paused a moment at the notions.

"How about it?" asked Miss Ferguson, breathlessly.

"They're going to think it over and let me know," answered "Bunny." "I told 'em I'd like to have an answer by to-morrow," he added.

"Fine!" commented the young woman, glowing.

Tricks of the Shopper

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

NO. 1—SOME "C. O. D.'s"

THE mild amazement of the door with a package.

"C. O. D.—from Blank—

$0.98.

"Oh, yes—well, let the man take it back. Say I've decided not to keep it—that it doesn't suit."

"But sir——"

"But how——" when the maid had gone, "how do you know? You didn't even open it?"

"Oh, I didn't want it anyway," carelessly, "if I didn't intend to keep it."

"But why——" and then I stopped, fearing my amazement was leading me to intrusion.

"Why did I have it sent?" laughed Mrs. Martin. "Well, I suppose I shouldn't. But you see I had taken over half an hour of my time to look at it, and had my pull down every block silk waist in the place. I must have tried on a dozen. So I just had to take something. I don't like any of them, but after taking up all that time and trying on so many—I simply couldn't walk out without deciding on one of them."

"But if you didn't intend to keep them—" I began

The Easiest Thing to Do

"Oh, well, it was the easiest thing to do at the time. I just couldn't get away without buying something."

"You mean you didn't have the courage to simply say that none of the waists suited you, so instead you had one sent C. O. D., knowing you would not keep it?"

She nodded. "Oh, I suppose it isn't just the right thing to do, but lots of people do it. When you've taken up so much of the clerk's time, and she's pulled down so many things and has been so serious to please, you just can't walk off and say 'I don't care for any of them.'

"And some clerks are much harder to get away from than others. They keep insisting that they know they have just what you want if you will only wait a moment. And then they bring out more and more, until you have something sent C. O. D. just to get away."

"But when you send the thing back," argued, "it is returned to the department from which it came, and the clerk knows then you didn't take it."

"I'm Not There Then"

"Yes, I suppose she does," with a shrug. "But I'm not there then."

"But I'm not there then!" That is the key to it all. It is the moral cowardice of persons who can't face a slightly embarrassing situation—but are wholly indifferent to what is thought of them when they are not there."

I have found since that Mrs. Martin was right in claiming that "lots of people do it. It is one of the "tricks of the shopper" with which the big department stores are very familiar. They know goods are often sent C. O. D. for which the customer has no thought of paying. They also know that sometimes goods are sent to a wholly fictitious address, and are brought back with the driver's report—"No one by that name at that number."

And the big store takes all very philosophically. But it is rather a sad commentary on human nature after all on women particular—that a regular item of expense and loss with which the department stores annually reckon is that caused by the small dishonesties of shoppers in this as many other ways.

Rules for Health

SIR JAMES SAWYER, the famous English physician, has taken pains to indicate a score of "rules for living life for a century," most of which have to do with physical habits. It may not be amiss here to reprint his rules:

"Sleep on your right side.

"Keep your bedroom window open at night.

"Have a mat at your bedroom door.

"Do not have your bed against the wall.

THE TAMING OF THE JUNGLE

By DR. C. W. DOYLE

Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Co.

CHAPTER XIII.

"A LITTLE brother hath come," said Biroo, as Ram Deen dismounted from the mail-cart. The tall driver sauntered up the little yard and hurried to his hut, over the door of which was affixed the green bough that is customary on such occasions, and whence came the wailing of a new-born child.

The inner apartment was guarded by a lean old woman, who refused Ram Deen admittance therein, even as Biroo, who prevented even speech on his part had she been able. But Ram Deen was not to be denied such solace as could be gained from the voice whose accents had taken his captive the first time he had heard them.

The feeble wailing of the babe made the strong man tremble.

"Tara, Light in Darkness, is it well with thee?" he asked.

"Quite well, my lord and my master," came the faint answer. "Thy handmaid hath bestowed a man-child upon thee, and Nana Dwal will require a kid of thee in recompense."

"He shall have a flock of goats, Heart of my heart——"

"Nay," interrupted Tara; "it is a very little child and a kid will suffice; but go now, my master, I am very tired and would fain sleep."

Ram Deen's Invocation

"May the stars in heaven shower their blessings on thee, my Best Beloved;" and with this invocation Ram Deen left the hut, leading little Biroo by the hand.

"See you, Gunga Ram gave me but now, father mine," said Biroo, unfolding a plaintain leaf wherein was wrapped a sweetmeat made of rice and milk; "and he hath a great cooking forward to-night."

"Wherefore?" asked Ram Deen.

"For that a man-child hath come to Nyagong, as well as Kaladoongie, this day."

"Oh, ho," said Ram Deen, chuckling softly, "we will have speech with Gunga Ram."

When they had arrived at the methalwallah's booth, Ram Deen, looking on the thalis (trays) heaped with sweetmeats crisp from the making, and other preparations by Gunga Ram, is the Hurdwar mela (fair) coming to the Bore Nuddee, that thou shouldst make such preparations?"

"Nay, couch-wan ji, but a man-child hath come to the house of the Jemadar of Nyagong, and he hath commanded fresh sweetmeats and cates for a feast in honor of an honorable birth."

"There is no honorable thing in Nyagong, Gunga Ram. They be all thugs and thieves there, and it shall not be said that Ram Deen's friends at Kaladoongie ate stale pooris whilst the Jemadar of Nyagong, whose face I have blackened, ate fresh cates before his guests. Therefore will carry these sweetmeats to my friends who sit round the Thanadar's fire, and tomorrow Ram shall make savage for the people of Kaladoongie, so that they may know that a son hath been born to Ram Deen."

"But, couch-wan ji," remonstrated Gunga Ram, "the Jemadar's men wait to carry these things to Nyagong."

"Tell them, Gunga Ram, that I had need of them; but, nevertheless, for the kindness the men of Nyagong did to little Biroo last year, send them, on his behalf, two rupees' worth of gur and parched gram;" and Ram Deen laid the money in the sweetmeat vendor's palm.

To the impromptu feast round the fire that evening Ram Deen contributed also a chatty of palm-toddy that Goor Dutt had brought for him from Moradabad. By the time the circling hookah had crowned the feast fresh cakes were wagging freely round the fire, and even Tulsi Ram, the village pundit, most modest and unassuming of men, was moved to unusual speech. Once more Ram Deen had told the story of the avenging of Nandha; and the Thanadar, whose utterances were always sententious, owing to the responsibility and dignity of his office, said, "Verily, the young and not the old Faringi is the true subduer of Hindoostan."

After the Great Mutiny

"Thou sayest it, Thanadar ji," assented Tulsi Ram. "I know such a young sahib as he who slew the lame tiger of Huldwani when I worked as munshi at Hurdwar for four years. For he, too, had business there. He I speak of feared not even the Gods."

When all eyes were turned upon the pundit, and he found himself in the trying position of one who was expected to give proof of his opinion, his nature moderately overcame him and he was suddenly silent. He was not till he had swallowed a generous draught of the toddy that his courage revived to the point of telling the following story, for which his audience waited patiently:

"Brothers," he began, "some three years after the great Mutiny there came to Hurdwar two Faringis, the name Scott for the one and Wilson Sahib, of whom the latter was a great shikari, as all Hindoostan is aware. She who was further known amongst the Faringis as "Pahari Wilson."

"They hired me to cut down all timber on the upper waters of the Ganga and float it down to Hurdwar, where they established a post, over which they set in charge a young Faringi named Clements Sahib, whose munshi I was, and whose duty it was to stamp the timber with the seal of his employers and make it into rafts that were then floated on to Allahabad.

"Clements Sahib had been found by Pahari Wilson Sahib in one of the villages of the Rejah of Tirt, whither he had fled from Cawnpore, where his father and mother had been killed by the people of that place during the season of the Mutiny.

"He was a man grown when he came to Hurdwar, speaking Nagari and Pahlavi, and knowing well the ways of our people. And wherever he went men's eyes followed him, for he was tall and slender, with the air of a master. His face was scarred with the marks of the small-pox, and his cheeks, and his shins were terrible to behold when he fell foul of him in the pride of his manhood.

"He feared nothing, brothers—neither man nor beast, nor even Ganesha, upon whom he had swallowed a centipede—the best his priests in the temple and he the presence of the God.

Stricken to the Death

"This was the way of it: There passed daily through our compound, on its way to the jungle, a young, sacred bull that was fed by the priests of Ganesha; and its horns had silver tips, whereon was graved a picture of the God bearing an elephant's head. And because the bull pursued one of his dogs, one day, the sahib shot it; and the bazaars of Hurdwar buzzed with anger upon.

"Sahib,' said I to him, 'this is not well done; the Gods never forget an insult.' But he only laughed.

"That evening, as the sahib ate his meal, the lamps being lit, there came an arrow through an open window and transfixed the dog which was lying at his feet.

"The beast yelped as one that is stricken to the death, and I, who sat at my hook in the adjoining room, looked up as Clements Sahib, snatching up a gun from the corner, ran in the veranda and fired at a man who passed swiftly through the darkling garden. For answer there came the lowing of a bull; and the sahib, being lame, soon gave up the chase and returned to the house.

"By the light of a lantern we searched the garden, and when we found drops of blood on the ground the sahib laughed, and said, 'Aha! Tulsi Ram! I wounded the sahib, sir, after all.'

"'Nay, I had hunting, sahib,' I made reply. 'The next moment he stopped, and held me in the veranda and fired at a man who passed swiftly through the darkling garden. For answer there came the lowing of a bull; and the sahib, being lame, soon gave up the chase and returned to the house.

"By the light of a lantern we searched

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Morgan is again at last knocking out "bank runs."

$ $ $

There are no stocks pressing for sale, and this being the case the bears have but small material to work upon. The public, however, do not seem inclined to be encouraged and are keeping up the fight in the face of tremendous odds.

$ $ $

Among the people in the Street whose opinion is worth considering, the idea prevails that it will not be a hard matter to bring about a considerable advance in prices, the only doubt being as to whether stocks would still find a market on a moderately higher level.

$ $ $

It is evident that the manipulation in the market at the present time is of a far broader sort than that which characterized the former campaigns. On the last the there was a rush to give stocks to the short interest, and the public became a little oversold, while now the scheme is to nurse the shortage along.

$ $ $

Five hundred special reports on farm values, covering 30 per cent. of the Middle and Southwestern grain belts, show no signs of liquidation, but rather a spirit of precaution in course grain values or any other crops, and the general tenor of the reports show declines in values as reflected in the short sales of the Stock Exchange, while the Western bank situation as strong as the Eastern.

$ $ $

Whereas the Reading Company's liquidities were figured as nearly $62,000,000 a year ago, they are now $100,000,000 at present, which would give an estimated earning value of double that figure. Its unmined coal is estimated at 2,500,000,000 tons, of which 6% per cent. of the entire annulled coal in the Pennsylvania fields is controlled by Jersey Central. At the present rate of consumption this is 250 years' supplies.

$ $ $

The acquisition of the additional stock of the Norfolk & Western by the Pennsylvania has been taken by the public as this the Pennsylvania intends to lease the road and guarantee a dividend. It is known that this plan has been under consideration, but it is not at all likely that such a scheme will be put through for some time to come, as the management of Pennsylvania is nothing if not conservative.

$ $ $

Even the bears are forced to admit that when stocks are offered in large amounts than money loaned out at interest, and this week is having been crowded, the bull naturally wants to know why it is that prices do not move up, and it is likely that such a scheme will be put through for some time to come, as the management of Pennsylvania is nothing if not conservative.

Fitzgerald, Hubbard & Co. are issuing a booklet entitled, "Dividend Paying Stocks," which contains detailed reports, dividend payments, prices and general information, as well as the usual market letter. The booklet value is a compilation of crop statistics and foreign and domestic copper quotations.

Cotton Exchange membership of R. H. Moro and W. H. Wrenn have been sold to N. Norden, Jr., for $14,000. They paid the latter at $14,500. Last previous sale was $14,000.

Atchison has ordered 500 steel underframe refrigerator cars from American Car & Foundry Co.

H. E. T. Hamilton, well-known and reliable mining engineer, says: "Porcupine has now more gold in sight, that is actually proved to exist by exploration and development than the total output of gold in Ontario up to date. Will Porcupine outline such districts as Johannesburg or Cripple Creek? Long ago are the shafts there is no evidence of any such extent of richness. But Porcupine can be very successful and a very important gold camp, and yet fall far short of these camps."

NOBODY WILL USE CRIPPEN STATEROOM

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Stateroom No. 62 on the White Star liner Megantic will in future be used as a storeroom. Although it is situated on the shelter deck and provides excellent accommodations for ocean travelers no one will occupy it now, as the stateroom was the last in which Dr. Hawley Crippen, who was hanged for the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore.

After Crippen was arrested at Rimouski he was put on board the Megantic and taken back to Liverpool. He was given stateroom No. 62, and Ethel Le Neve occupied a cabin adjoining. Since then Belle cabins are looked upon as jinxed, and whenever they have been offered to travelers the question has been asked: "Is that the cabin Dr. Crippen had?"

12,000 WEAK-MINDED PUPILS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Twelve thousand school children in this city are feeble-minded, and at least 30 per cent. of the criminality dealt with by the Children's Court and the Gerry Society is due to this condition, according to the examining physician of both these institutions, Dr. Max Schlapp, who is also professor of the Psychiatry Section of the Academy of Medicine.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF BRIGHTON MAN

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 9.—Joseph W. Doherty of Brighton, Mass., who was found on a suburban road on the night of December 30 in an unconscious condition, is dead at the Margaret Pillsbury Hospital. Since the accident the police have been trying to find out what caused the man to be in the condition in which he was found.

MORGAN OFF FOR EUROPE WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—J. Pierpont Morgan will sail for Europe on Wednesday, probably on the St. Paul. He has made it his custom for years to leave for Europe on his annual vacation at the end of the New Year's holidays, the departure is usually delayed until a little later.

MANY LIVES LOST IN LANDSLIDES

TASHKENT, Russian Turkestan, Jan. 9.—Further reports from the earthquake zone indicate that the damage to the town of Przhevalsk, in the territory of Semipetchensk, was comparatively slight, but that many lives were lost through landslides on the roads to that place.

C. H. PORTER, HOST AT BOSTON KANGAROO FEAST

C. HAROLD PORTER.

Kangaroo is the latest place de resistance for a Boston meal. It was enjoyed by those at a feast given by C. Harold Porter, a Summer street provision dealer. A friend in Australia, A. L. Brown, a draftsman of the English Navy, had shipped him the kangaroo. The guests of Mr. Porter were Colonel C. H. Porter, father of the host; a dietitian, Miss Hamilton of Franklin; A. L. Tufts of Franklin; Dr. Bennett, Francis H. Appleton and F. H. Bennett.

FIND WYLIE AND MRS. HICHBORN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Horace Wylie, the well known Washington club and society man, and Mrs. Phillip S. Hichborn, equally prominent socially, who disappeared from their homes here together a week before Christmas, are spending the Winter on the Nile.

Information from this effect has reached friends of the couple by a roundabout way. Nine days after their disappearance from Washington they were seen in Naples aboard the steamer Prinz Adalbert, Egypt. They are understood to have left America by way of Canada.

One of the most interesting phases of this startling elopement is the statement now made that Mrs. Hichborn and Mr. Wylie will never again return to live in civilization than is represented by Cairo. They have elected to spend their lives in the land of the ancient Pharaohs, where they can live for each other and shut out of the range of the starting and gossiping tongues.

Other is true to this alleged purpose by the fact which has also become known that before she left Washington Horace Wylie placed all his property in trust, for first benefiting his wife's portion into funds for his wife and children. Of the remainder he took a large amount with him in the shape of a letter of credit.

It is also learned that on the day that Wylie disappeared his son, Andrew, a student at the fashionable boys' school at Lawrenceville, N. J., received a message from his father bidding him farewell and asked the young man to still live and trust him.

Washington society has ceased to discuss this sensational case save to express curiosity now and then as to the future course of the deserted wife and the abandoned husband who were left behind.

The statement that Mrs. Hichborn was in a sanitarium has long since been exploded, and the fact of the elopement is tacitly admitted. Whether Mrs. Wylie and Mr. Hichborn will seek release in the divorce court is a matter for gossip and speculation only.

'TONY' BIDDLE JARS SOCIETY MATRONS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.— Society matrons are endeavoring to find some manner in which to put a stop to the athletic activity of "Tony" Biddle, chum and backer of Jack Johnson, who recently opened a new athletic club here. It has just developed that in his loyalty to O'Brien and his desire to make the new club a financial success, Mr. Biddle has pledged many of his friends to refrain from attending receptions on Saturday nights in order that they might attend the events at the Automobile Athletic Club. Hostesses have just awakened to the fact that if the friends of Mr. Biddle, who are numerous, stick to their promise to him, there will be a dearth of male dancing material at Saturday night entertainments.

CLARK SPURNS CZAR-LIKE POWERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—In an interview on the speakership, to which he expects to be elected, Champ Clark declares he wants no czar powers. "I am going to be the first real Speaker the House has had for fifty years," he said. "If the House Democrats are united, if we seize our opportunity and meet the responsibility with courage, wisdom and prudence, we ought to have a long lease of power, and I am satisfied that we shall."

DR. W. E. BAXTER RECEIVES SHOCK

Dr. William E. Baxter of No. 755 Boylston street was overcome while walking with his son in the Chestnut Hill woods of Lake avenue, Newton, when Dr. Baxter was taken to the home of Dr. M. E. Dissell, 1 Vernon street, Newton. Dissell is of the opinion that the exertion of walking affected Dr. Baxter's heart.

PROMISES 'PHONE ACROSS THE STYX

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Laura A. Fizen, a spiritualistic medium, announces that an instrument is in process of invention which will enable the living to communicate with the dead. This invention will bridge the Styx and its success will be due to mechanical genius, she says. "It will be something like a telephone," said Mrs. Fizen. "As soon as we get it, each of us can talk directly with loved ones gone before."

GUGGENHEIMS PLAN BIG COPPER MERGER

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Although sentiment improved materially last week and prices have advanced somewhat, the whole financial world has come to realize that the speculative situation is secondary in importance to all financial business in this country are occupying definite positions, with regard to securities.

The Standard Oil people are against the market in the sense that they are out of it. The Morgan interests are in favor of the market only in the sense that they are not fighting it to produce the banking situation. Neither side wants a panic or a boom in stocks; and neither side will tolerate anything designed to bring about either. Prices will merely play within a narrow range, but they must be wary. This condition will exist until the two great powers can exactly how the Interstate Commerce Commission intends to exercise its tremendous authority over railroad rates, and how the Supreme Court and the government at Washington will construe and enforce the Sherman anti-trust law.

Until these things can be known with absolute certainty the deadlock in high finance will continue. When they are known there will be a rush of new buying to spring into healthy activity, for it has had a long rest and there are many things to be decided during the remainder of the year.

Story of Harriman Deal.

Now a new story of that deal is obtaining credence. The Hill roads were invading the Union Pacific territory and Harriman's attempts to head them off through purchase of the Northern Pacific had been nullified by the Supreme Court. His only other method of defence was to extend the St. Paul through the Pacific, thus giving Northern Pacific a dangerous rival which would have to be vanquished before Union Pacific could be injured. St. Paul could not raise the money to build, and if Union Pacific had advanced it the Hill people would have appreciated the situation in time to strike a blow at Harriman. By retiring men like William Rockefeller and James Stillman of their burdens of other stocks, the Union Pacific treasury placed them in position to take new stock issued by St. Paul for building this extension. If this theory of the situation is correct, Harriman not only acted the part of an honest man in the transaction, but did a tremendously good thing for the stockholders of the Union Pacific.

ARCHDUKE JOANN'S SKELETON FOR SALE

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—"For Sale—The skelet not Archduke Joann, brother of Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria, the genuine and intact. Box. 46, Denver, Illinois." This was an advertisement in a newspaper here. The archduke was officially pronounced dead by the high court marshal's office in Vienna on July 8 of last year. The court marshal decided he had died some time between August 3 and August 8, 1890, when the bark Maria Margarette, on the Danube, on which he was master, was lost. Archduke John Salvador, who was born in 1852, was son of Grand Duke Leopold 2d of Tuscany by his second wife, Marie Antoinette. He in 1910. Four new corporations were formed having a combined capital of $4,500,000 and $750,000 bonds.

W. G. M'ADOO AND SPRECKELS TO SPEAK

William G. McAdoo, the man who conceived the tunnel system in New York, and Rudolph Spreckles of San Francisco, are to be the principal speakers at the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet in the Hotel Somerset, January 30. McAdoo's views on the way Boston should handle its transit problems will be a feature. Spreckles is the San Francisco sugar magnate who backed Attorney Francis J. Heney in his prosecution of grafters at the Golden Gate.

HAVERHILL WOMEN IN SUFFRAGE CLUB

Under the personal direction of Mrs. R. H. Page and Miss Alice Carpenter of Boston and Belle Sherwin of Lynn a woman's suffrage club has been organized in Haverhill. The primary object will be to induce the Legislature to submit to some vote on a woman suffrage bill. Already Representative Charles H. Morrill has promised his support, and the women of Haverhill aren't giving Representatives Henry G. Wells and James L. Fitzgerald any peace in hopes that they will force them to declare in the interests of their cause.

MILL BOOM IN NEW BEDFORD

NEW BEDFORD, Jan. 9.—The financial review of the manufacturing and general business of this city for 1910 is pleasing. It shows that seven new mills have been erected, requiring the expenditure of more than $6,000,000, a record surpassed only by that of 1909. About two-thirds of this amount was furnished by investors residing outside the city. These additional mills will give employment to about 2,850 more operatives.

The dividends paid from earnings of 1910 and from accumulations of years past, reached the five million dollar mark for the first time. The deposits in national banks, safe deposit and trust company and savings banks are the largest than on before. Dealings in real estate are much larger than in previous years, and a greater number of dwellings have been erected.

There has been more or less curtailment of production in the mills throughout the year, in some instances nearly 20 per cent. of the looms being idle, owing to the curtailment of consumption caused by the high price of raw cotton on account of a short crop and renewed demand for a revision of the tariff downward on cotton goods.

As another short crop is expected this year, further reduction in the output is looked for during the next six months at least. The mills generally are strong financially, however. The effect of the great increase in New Bedford's population has been felt by the wholesale and retail trades, who are well pleased with the increased business. Collections have been good, and merchants have not been well employed.

During 1910 the net gain in capital invested in cotton industries in this city was $3,000,000, and there was also $2,000,000 of cotton mill bonds subscribed for, making a total amount of $7,750,000 invested in New Bedford cotton mill industries in 1910. Four new corporations were formed having a combined capital of $4,500,000 and $750,000 bonds.

BOSTON BANKERS INTERVIEW TAFT

The Boston bank presidents, A. L. Ripley of the State National and Daniel G. Wing of the First National, who were among those in consultation at the White House with President Taft, have returned to Boston. They were not only made familiar with the tentative ideas which Senator Aldrich has about making up the new bill to take the place of the Payne bill immediately, however. The effect of the great increase in New Bedford's population has been felt by the wholesale and retail trades, who are well pleased with the increased business. Collections have been good, and merchants have not been well employed.

During 1910 the net gain in capital invested in cotton industries in this city was $3,000,000, and there was also $2,000,000 of cotton mill bonds subscribed for, making a total amount of $7,750,000 invested in New Bedford cotton mill industries in 1910. Four new corporations were formed having a combined capital of $4,500,000 and $750,000 bonds.

LODGERS IN PANIC AT HAVERHILL FIRE

HAVERHILL, Jan. 9.—Fire caused a $5,000 loss in the five-story lodging house on Walnut street owned by Hiram Harriman and conducted by Mrs. Annie Williams. There were sixty people housed in the building and all were forced to flee in scanty attire. Mrs. Williams was overcome by smoke after she had aroused the occupants. Charles Walker, who is deaf, was awakened by the flames, and slid to safety on a rope fire escape. Mrs. Williams' daughter reached ground by the use of the rope, and Miss Marion Amero jumped ten feet from the window of her room on the third floor to the roof of the building below. Another young woman was found clinging to the window sill and rescued.

FLEET BRAKEMAN PREVENTS WRECK

CLAREMONT, Jan. 9.—Running ahead of an east-bound Boston & Maine freight train stalled in a coal car in the middle of the train leaping the rails on to the westbound track, Brakeman Fred Leighton signalled Engineer Larrabee of a west-bound express in time to prevent a serious wreck. Engineer Larrabee, seeing the signal, closed the throttle and set the brakes, with the result that the express slowed down from fifty to fifteen miles an hour before it struck the coal car.

The jar threw the forty passengers about in confusion and several were cut and bruised.

Business Success Through Publicity
No. 15

How a Manufacturer Markets a Tooth Powder

Successful advertising of desirable goods consists of the right copy in the right media. It need not be largest copy. It must be persistent copy. It must go in at regular intervals, week in and week out. A man who thinks he can advertise one day and forget it for the next two or three months would be wiser if he put his money into a safe deposit box.

There is a manufacturer of tooth powder who uses but two inches in display copy, next to and following reading matter, in the leading papers day in and day out. He's got a standard article which sells at a standard price, and there is a standard demand for it all the time. Competition doesn't affect him very much. It's an old family sanctity. Tooth powders may come and go, but this tooth powder looks as if it might go on forever. The manufacturer has solved the problem of successful merchandising in the right kind of copy in the right kind of newspapers with the right kind of persistency.

Write the right kind of copy. If you cannot do it, go to the right kind of an agent who will put it persistently in the right kind of newspapers, and you wake up some day to find you have an investment in good will of your product and in a constant demand for it which will be better than the best stocks and bonds, because it is never affected by market fluctuations or the wills and whims of the retailer. The Dear Public will demand it and the most conservative dealers will have to carry it, whether they would like or no.

Let us tell you about the value of the Boston American for any kind of newspaper advertising. Do not forget that it is bought by nearly 400,000 people every day, that it goes into more homes than all the other Boston evening papers, that it has more features that appeal to more people than any other. If you want to know why you should use it and how you can begin the right kind of a campaign, address the Boston American, Trade Aid Department, for further particulars along these lines.

AMERICAN WANT "ADS" BRING QUICK RESULTS

MANY NEW FEATURES SEEN AT AUTO SHOW

By J. C. KERRIGON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—During the rush and bustle of the opening hours on Saturday night, only a cursory glance of the cars on exhibition in Madison Square Garden could be secured. It was not a propitious time for the study of motor construction and models, as the crowd surged up one isle and down the other, more intent on getting a superficial view of the display than one of a close analytical nature.

During yesterday, however, when the world at large was denied admission to the great industrial exhibition, those sufficiently interested made it a point to inspect the display. Those not familiar with the subject matter will not notice any great or startling changes in the cars. Those who motor most, however, find many new and interesting features. The cars appeal most strongly to the more fastidious — to the man who desires refinement and the finished product.

It was noticed that there were 200 chassis of American made gasoline cars. This is an increase in number over previous shows. The selling prices of which range from $500 to $6,000 and over, showing conclusively that the day of the high-priced car has by no means expired.

Many Medium Priced Cars.

It is interesting to note that there are no less than eleven models selling for less than $1,000, twenty-two models selling between $1,000 and $1,490, and twenty-two between $1,500 and $1,900. There are thirty models selling for between $2,000 and $2,999, twenty-nine between $3,000 and $3,999, nineteen between $4,000 and $4,999, and ten selling for $5,000 and over.

Eighty-two per cent. of the cars displayed at this show are of the four-cylinder, 12 per cent. of the six-cylinder, and 6 per cent. of the one, two and eight, showing a depreciation of almost 50 per cent. since last show.

Water cooling seems to have held its own in the opinion of the makers, 99 per cent. of the cars displayed being of the water-cooled variety. The thermo-syphon has made a slight increase over the previous show, in the matter of drive, the side-chains have decreased somewhat, the shaft drive having materially improved, 92 per cent. of the cars shown using propeller side shaft, and 4 per cent. side-shaft, and 4 per cent. single chain drive.

The sliding gear transmission has increased during the year, while planetary transmission shows a depreciation. There is but one single-cylinder on the show, six two-cylinders, no three-cylinders, twenty-six-cylinders, four four-cylinder cars.

The double ignition system seems to have made an increase, 113 of the cars being equipped with two starters, eighteen with magnetos alone, six with batteries alone, and 64 of the total number of cars with one of the jump-spark ignition—the latter six being of the make and brake character.

Average $1,500 to $1,600.

Of the engines shown, fifty-four have cona clutches, seventy-six multiple disc, nine band, and four miscellaneous. The selective type of gear-shift shows a great leadership over all others, there being 128 of this variety to eight planetary, four friction and three progressive. Thirty-five speeds forward likewise predominate, there being eight-eight of that number, while forty-one four-speeds and ten two-speeds.

These facts and figures give one an idea of just how things are in the motor world. It can be assumed from the prices on the cars displayed that the average car of 1911 will sell for between $1,500 and $1,600. They will have a four-cylinder engine and valves all on one side, the dust ignition system with self-contained lubrication system in the engine base. The cars shown are unquestionably the best constructed that has ever been seen.

The most striking car of the display is the Packard exhibit is the Packard "Thirty" brougham, which is a decided addition to the line of Packard enclosed cars. It has a five-passenger, limited-capacity body on a phaeton chassis, this body being interchangeable with the open touring body. There is no division in the body, the driver and passengers being all in the same enclosure. There is a door on each side, the right door entering to the rear seat and the left door entering to the front seat. There is a folding seat in front of the left front seat similar to that in the coupe. The car is trimmed throughout with a gray checkered cloth that is in keeping with the style design. The trimming is novel, as it is done without the conventional bead-line, being plain but elegant. The car is painted/red in black and gray striping, while all the metal parts are nickel-plated.

Packard "30" Coupe.

The other enclosed car exhibited is a Packard "Thirty" coupe, which is a two or three-passenger inside-operated car, the body of which is interchangeable with the open runabout body or either a Packard "Thirty" or "Eighteen" runabout chassis. This coupe exhibited is painted in bright red and black, the body panels and running gear being red, while the bonnet, fenders, upper body and other similar parts are black. The monogram panel is of dark yellow. The interior is trimmed in a light cloth.

Prominent among the new cars are the Roadster and Demi-Tonneau styles of the E-M-F "30." These new companions for the popular E-M-F "30" Touring Car differ from it only in body equipment. The standard E-M-F "30" chassis has been lengthened in the Demi-tonneau and Roadster types, except in the lower angle of rake given the steering column, which comports with the more racy appearance of these cars.

Both of the new body styles are of modern, up-to-the-minute design, and in both the comfort of the passengers has been carefully worked out.

The E-M-F "30" Roadster embodies many of the features of the E-M-F Company's successful racing cars. It is equipped with bucket seats and carries a large gasoline tank in the rear. Its design, while not extreme enough to impair the absolute comfort of its occupants, is close to speed, which has been shown by the cars of its classic model, in contests of all sorts.

The Hudson "33," being the latest creation of Howard E. Coffin, is naturally being closely inspected by visitors to the show. Mr. Coffin occupies an eminently unique place in the best automobile designers of America and Europe, on account of his efforts for the advancement of automobiles and the motor car industry.

YOUNG REARDON TO MEET YOUNG JASPER

BROCKTON, Mass., Jan. 9.—Young Reardon of this city has been matched to fight Young Jasper of Hyde Park, Wednesday, in the ten-round final bout for 50 per cent. of the gate receipts, split 60 and 40. Jack Edwards, who handles Reardon, said to-day that Reardon suffered injury to a shoulder in his last contest, but this recovered sufficiently to be able to take up stiff training with Edwards and Young Quill.

COLLEGE EDITOR IS RHODES SCHOLAR

BURLINGTON, Vt., Jan. 9.—From a field of seven candidates, Miles Lyman, the University of Vermont, 1911, has been chosen as the next Rhodes scholar from Vermont, according to announcement made to-day by the committee having the matter in charge. Lyman graduates next June. He has been prominent in football and dramatics and is editor-in-chief of the college paper. Like his father he is a member of the Sigma Phi Fraternity.

HOTEL AND RAILROAD MEN'S SHOW TO-NIGHT

The annual minstrel show of the Hotel and Railroad Mutual Benefit Association will be given to-night and to-morrow night in Jordan Hall, Huntington Chambers. Those who are to take part have been rehearsing for weeks, and the show this year is expected to be one of all previous efforts. Both performances commence at 8 o'clock.

BOSTON MEN WIN HONORS AT ROME

ROME, Jan. 9.—American students were prominent this year at the distribution of the prizes to students in the Chapel of the Propaganda Fide. The following Boston students were awarded honorary prizes: David Fitzgerald and Andrew O'Brien; history, ecclesiastical and canonical; and John Kelley of Hartford won the mathematics and Greek prizes.

NO SILK HAT WITH GOV. CRUCE'S JIMSWINGER

OKLOHOMA CITY, Jan. 9.—Gov.-elect Cruce, who disappointed society women and a host of others by refusing to appear here by refusing to wear a silk hat at the inaugural ball and met the situation half-way by wearing a Jimswinger and a straw hat, has changed his mind. The Governor now says he will appear with the Jimswinger and a Stetson. The plug hat is in the discard.

The AMERICAN gained over 4,000 columns of advertising last year. It nearly equalled the combined gain of the other three leading Boston newspapers having daily and Sunday editions in 1910. It is the New England record and pretty nearly a world's record. The answer is—results. "Nothing succeeds like circulation."

To-morrow's Important Election—Every Citizen Should Feel Interested

The AMERICAN cannot urge too strongly upon its readers the importance of to-morrow's election.

The campaign is ending in a dull and dispirited way. Our citizens seem to think that as this is an "off year" it is not important who is elected. This is a great mistake.

NO ELECTION SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO GO BY DEFAULT. It is in "off year" elections that the real damage to the entire community is done, because citizens who should cast their ballots for the best candidates remain at home.

There is no "off year" in decent citizenship. The voter who desires to see the best man elected to office never relaxes his vigilance. Politicians, as everybody knows, work all the time, and usually their work is AGAINST the interests of the city and its decent people. Politicians work only for profit and power. Most of them have only one guide post in life—the $ mark.

If voters will go to the polls to-morrow and cast their ballots as they should, there will be NO DOUBT about the honesty and efficiency of the new members of the Council and the School Committee.

The Air Men That Are Killed

They Are Real Soldiers of Civilization; Real Fighters in a Good Cause, One More Glorious and Useful Than Those That Inspire Fighters of the Battlefield—with Few Exceptions

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

The recent deaths of Moisant and Hoxsey are lamentable, but the protests against aviation which they have called forth are foolish and entirely unjustified.

The human race is engaged in a great battle for the conquest of the air, and the battle will be won.

It will be won partly, and perhaps chiefly, by the theorizing, the planning and inventing of scientists in their studies. But it must be won in part also by the men that actually venture into the air, by the men that have the courage to try new machines, even at the risk of life.

In the battle for air conquest, as in every other battle, the work is done partly by the planner of the campaign, safe from shot, and partly by the man in the front rank risking the bullets.

The two men that have just been killed and the thirty or more before them that have dropped from the skies to die since successful flight was begun by man are men that have fallen in a noble fight.

Their lives are not wasted; they could not have died for a better cause. And in proportion to the service that they render to humanity and to the future, the lives lost are few indeed.

When you build a bridge across a big river you know before you start that you will kill in the compressed air caissons below the water and on the ironwork high in the air more men than have been killed all together by experiments in flying machines.

When you appropriate your money for the fire department in a big city, at the beginning of the year, you know that you are appropriating money to be paid to men of whom many will lose their lives before the year is ended. But you know also that they will die to save others, and you know that it is right that they should die, since they are willing to take the risk.

Any little skirmish of the old battles, a great majority of them useless and brutal, was more fatal to human life than all the flying machine experiments of man up to date.

One of our readers has suggested that the law should prevent these flying machine experiments, or select a few individuals to test these machines, and as they are killed off select others, diminishing the number of deaths.

There is nothing in that suggestion nor in any other suggestion that would put a limit to experiments in the air. It is not possible to estimate the value to humanity of the perfected flying machine. That machine, and that alone, will make men really independent of distance on this planet. No man could die in a better cause, and no man willing to risk his life in a pursuit so noble should be interfered with or hindered.

The authorities should, of course, forbid and prevent the regrettable childish attempts of boys and immature youths, of whom a number have been killed in the effort to make of themselves flying machine heroes.

But the earnest man, if willing to risk death in this great effort of human achievement, should be encouraged and well rewarded in his life, honored in his death, if death must come, looked upon as a soldier dead upon the field of honor.

When you know the history of man you know how, little by little, he has gained his freedom. When you realize that freedom from superstition cost millions upon millions of lives, including the burning at the stake of thousands; when you realize that every little step in political freedom has cost the lives of hundreds of thousands of human beings, when you know that every great industrial development tending to give man freedom from poverty has had its victims unnumbered, you realize that the human race can well afford to lose thirty brave men, or thirty thousand, in the struggle to obtain freedom from the power of gravitation, and to open up to mankind the great highways of the atmosphere, the beautiful, broad, boundless paths of man's future travel.

Many of our readers have sent us poems about these dead air men, all expressing sympathy and horror at their fate. We have published none of them, but wait for a poem that will treat this subject as it should be treated, describing the men that die in their fight for supremacy of the air as real heroes, dead, in a good cause, and gladly risking death for that cause.

MR. EDISON'S VIEWS ON IMMORTALITY

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

MEN who plow, dig in the gravel or work in mines do not make the best astronomers. Stars are overhead, not under foot, and people see only those things that lie in the direction in which they are looking.

Our thoughts take the complexion of our employment. Working in matter makes materialists. If a man's business is such as to keep his travelling up and down stairs into the cellar he will miss some things that he might perhaps gain a glimpse of if his regular duties kept him upstairs, nearer to the skylight.

We are thinking just now of Mr. Edison the electrician. There lived in Germany a hundred and fifty years ago two brothers by the name of Humboldt. Equally possessed of fine endowments, one of the two employed his talents in scientific researches, in the study of botany, geology and zoology. The other, with warm sympathies for man and for all the ways in which human life manifests itself, devoted himself to the study of language, literature and law.

The first said of himself that his religion was "the religion of all men of science," meaning by that that he had no religion that was worth speaking of. The second, William Humboldt, had no sympathy with his brother's materialism, possessed a warm sense of spiritual existence and "never lost the traces of a divine government over the world."

This case illustrates in a telling way the degree to which our opinions are determined by the material we work in, and is an example of the fact that things which lie in a different direction from our employment will be hidden from us by our very devotion to that employment.

Why Scientists Doubt Immortality of the Soul

Mr. Edison is a case in point. He has been saying some things about immortality and has set himself up as an authority qualified to pronounce dogmatically on the question. He is quoted as saying: "Religion? Hereafter? What do these ministers know about it that I don't know? No, I don't believe that a man's mind lives after him."

I would say to our distinguished electrical genius that it is not being a "minister" that makes a man believe in some things that he disbelieves. Whether one be clergyman or layman his beliefs will depend very considerably on the character of his interests and employment.

If one's sympathies and engagements are exclusively with things material, tangible, destructible, as Mr. Edison's are, one will know nothing else, believe in nothing else, and can believe in nothing else. His ideas and inspirations are materialized by the materialism of his business.

He is no more entitled to pass judgment on the soul and its possibilities as a man whose only occupation and interest is in driving sheep is entitled to pronounce on the knotty questions of the law, the refined problems of art or Copernicus's theory of the universe.

The more thoroughly a man knows one thing, the less qualified he will personally be to pronounce dogmatically on anything else.

We are not arguing for immortality; this is not the place for it. We are only interested to give publicity to the idea that however distinguished a man may be in one line of pursuit, it gives him no authority to pronounce upon questions that he has not been in a situation to inform himself upon.

Talebearing the Cause of Much Friction in Life

THE machinery of life runs with a good deal of friction, but much would be done toward diminishing the heat at the bearings if we would maintain the habit of putting always the best possible construction upon the people and upon what they do and say, rather than the worst, and if we would report only the pleasant things that are said of them, and leave unspoken those that are to their discredit.

We seem to ourselves to be so generous and noble-minded, that it is strange that we are more prompt and take more comfort in publishing the shortcomings of others than in giving currency to their excellencies.

Indeed, without exactly knowing it or meaning it, we are most of us considerably malicious in spots; there surely are threads of hatefulness, braided in with the strands of our loving kindness, otherwise we should be even more swift to cover up the blemishes of people than to advertise their virtues.

Talebearing is a kind of scavengering, and, like the scavenger of common refuse, befouls the hands that employ themselves in it.

Charitableness is not a demonstrative grace, but is a kind of subtle lubricant that wonderfully reduces the strain that wrenches and wears the mechanism of social life.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About His Pa's Sickness

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA was sick in bed yesterday. It is the first time that I have ever saw Pa sick, & Ma toald me that she never saw him sick either. It worried Ma & me to see Pa sick, beekaus it says in ese of the doctor books that wen a big strong man gets sick he goes fast & stays where he goes.

The doctor was up to the house this morning, & after he had felt of Pa's pulse & looked at Pa's tongue, the doctor shook his hed. A vary seerius cold, the doctor sed. You must eet lots of litte food & drink plenty of hevvy clothing over you. If a man like you happened for to catch the pneu-mony, it would be a case of calling in a lawyer to make sure will. Then the doctor went out, shaking his hed all the way.

Oh, deer me, sed Pa, I am a sick man. I dont know wether I am going to live a other day or not. Well, deer wife, Pa sed, you was always a ray of sunshine to me, & our littel Bobbie is a grand littel son, so wen I go unto that barn from wich no traveler returns I will know that I have not lived in vain. Farewell, luved ones, sed Pa, a last, long farewell.

Jest a minnit, sed Ma, you ain't going to sneek away that fast. Let me go out & git you jest one mozr hot water botel & git you jest one mozr hot water botel & git you jest one mozr hot water botel & git the sling, but as soon as he had it he took the hot water bag & put it ou his hed & began to groan sum more. Oh, deer, sed Pa, I am going, going, Wife, sed Pa, have you got that littel picter that you & me had took the first year we was married, the time we was in Pasydenty, California? Bring it to me, sed Pa, that I may look once mozr at a picter that shows us wen was in our erly happiest. I am not long for this earth.

Pa, & feebur I go I want to tell you how much I appreciate all the luving acks wich you have did for me. A man nevver reelizes what a grate thing a good & luving wife is, Pa sed, until he is dying. Oh, deer, sed Pa, to think that the end shud cum so soon, Goodby, littel Bobbie, sed Pa. Goodby, Pa, I sed.

Jest then a other doctor cain in, & he looked at Pa a minnit & beegan for to laff. My deer Madam the doctor sed, I thought that you sed Pure Husband was about to die. Well, sed Ma, he seemed to be feeling kind of poorly, & I thought it wuldent be a bad idee to send for sumbody that knew all about how to handel vary sick peepul. He seemed to rare a good deal, the last hour or so, sed Ma.

Oh, deer, sed Pa, it is hard to part with a luving wife & a son wich worships the ground on wich one walks on. But on wich I shall nevver walk on agenn. Let them rite on my toomstone He Done His Best, Altho it wasent Much.

Goodbye, sed Pa.

Now see here, sed the doctor, you are talking like a big baby. You have a littel cold in the hed, that's all, & you are curling up & quitting like a dog. Remember, the doctor told Pa, I have often met you out in publick places & heard you tell what a game guy you always was no matter what the dangerwas that con-fronted you. All you need is a change, the doctor sed. Say our wisky along every hour.

I will be glad to give him what you perskribe, dotod, sed Ma, but that wuldent be my change. How about sum nice hot lemmunade? I think that wud be eeven better, sed the doctor. Oh, deer, sed Pa, I guess I will git up & go to work. & he did, & he is all rite now.

Thrift

By WEX JONES

ONE of the most useful aids to economy is a book of household accounts.

Yet care should be taken not to devote excessive time to it. A woman living in Hingham, for instance, found that she had two cents in cash more than the amount indicated by her account book when she balanced it on December 31. She spent the entire first week of January in going over her book, adding up the various items no less than 5[illegible] times, with only 1[illegible] varying results. What the woman should have done was to buy a stamp and forget to enter it in her accounts. She would have squared everything in a moment and the stamp could have been used in some sensible way, such as being placed upon a letter intended for the mail.

Another account book showed a day's expenses to be as follows:

Miscellaneous	$8.00
Telephone call to find out if husband was at office	.10
Ditto	.10
Box of candy	.50
Telephone call to find out if husband was at office	.10
Ditto	.10
Taxi to office to find out cause of husband's absence	1.00
Miscellaneous, $8 or $9 (about)
Total	$
Not quite sure.

It is not generally known that thousands of Bostonians raise their own vegetables. They do it with the dumbwaiter.

A well-known clubwoman found that she was paying $5 a week for stationery. At once she resolved to cut out the expense altogether, so now she never writes a letter, but sends a telegram, which she writes on blanks supplied by the telegraph company.

There was no grace in A—— a small town in New Hampshire, six miles from the nearest civilization. The local grocer a young man who made a precarious living by selling packages of breakfast food in a community where steak, sausages and such trifles were the staples for the early morning eats, resolved to remedy the defect. Accordingly he bought a garage on the instalment plan from a mail order house, and as he drove to Boston before the shipment [illegible] made he didn't lose anything by it. Meanwhile the young man is now working in the grocery department at Deer Island.

An observant youth noticed one day the a subway passenger who dropped a nickel into one of the slot machines got a piece of chocolate in exchange. It occurred to the youth that the company must lose a considerable sum every year owing to such accidents, so he went home and began work on an improved machine which has now been patented. This is warranted never to release a single piece of candy, and the observant youth is likely to make a large fortune.

Putting up preserves as a means of adding to the family income is often tried by women in the country, but it remained for a Dorchester woman to put up whole breakfasts. The can, which may be stored away, a sans jet, contains oatmeal, bacon and eggs, coffee, buns and grape fruit. The grape fruit has to be taken out first, after the fruit has been heated and allowed to cool, as hot grape fruit is rarely appreciated. Those living in boilerooms or rooms where cooking is prohibited should be careful to remove the cans when going to work.
